DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

"THE SOUTH BREEZE"

Peggy's Story

SHALL tell you a story about the cross-patch old woman who lived in collow and the fairy princess who oldew and the fairy princess who like the story of the cross-looking children. Pegsy to the cross-looking children he southland. The children sat down med her, while Bobolink, Mr. and Robin. Mr. Wren and the other ry birds peeked down from their me piaces in the trees.

1821' felt that she had to tell a good with the she could win a supper for birds.

I'm cross because I'm misgrable, lonesome, and the bugs and worms sating up my potatoes and fruit.

airy Princess Cheer-Up laughed at No, you are all turned around, cried. The bugs and worms are g up your potatoes and fruit, you lonesome, and you are miserable, use you are cross. Po you want cured of being cross?

to see them, as, without know-had missed them very much, we will get rid of your bug roubles? cried Fairy Princess (to, my helpers, go and gob-ry bug and worm you find in peats patch and garden and orenard.

Add away went the birds into the potato patch and garden and orenard, and they publied up the worms and bugs so fast hat in half an hour there wasn't one eft. The old woman looked at the birds

aft. The old woman looked at the birds with grateful eyes.

"Ah ah, you have saved my potatoes. By cabbages, my fruit, and you have brought joy back to my heart again. You were my friends and I didn't know it. After this you will always be missement my home in the bollow, and I will shways share my food with you, for you have more than earned it.' And the old woman called her friends in to ripice with her, and she was so pleased wer getting out of her crossness that he became a glad old lady instead of a cross-patch, and lived in peace and planty ever after."

The red-headed boy looked at Peggy curiosity. unically.

"I don't know whether that is an amusement story or a lesson story," he said slowly. "But whichever it is, I know what I'm going to do to birds that come around here!"

Now what do you suppose the red-headed boy intends to do?

No you think he is going to call his hither and brothers to shoot the birds?
What is going to happen in the next chapter?

The Woman's Exchange

be the Editor of Woman's Page:

Dear Madarn—Have read so much consening the burial of the unknown warrier in Wasinninster Abbey, but never the latest was buried there, as there were many solders who lost their lives and wife not accounted for. MRS. L.

The unknown warrier was buried in Westminster Abbey as a beautiful tribute in all those other dead whose names were not known. Since it was not possible to henor each one in this way, one was chosen to represent all in this expression of gratitude and honor.

To "Mrs. L. G."

To "Mrs. L. G."

The baby should have six long dresses and six petticoats, made of a nice quality of nainspok, six night gowns, six thirs, six tiny bands and a quantity of diapers. Then there ought to be about three finnel petticoats, a wrapper, some little finnel knitted sacques, edged with ribben or scaliops, a light coat for the coach, a "best" cap, an every-day cap and some knitted bootles.

Tar on Skirt the Editor of Woman's Page:

Dear Madim-I am a constant reader your evening paper. Your woman's taking everything in general, certifully is help'ul to all. I would like to know how I can take to make the to know how I can take to help skirty

Colors to Wear

Dear Madam — Would you kindly inform me through your valuable column
the most becoming color for auburn har and brown eyes, fair akin. Also, could one of that complexion wear gray
buched with deep violet?

The woman with hair of this color being particularly well in brown. For yourself a shade that matches your war the gray, for this is another beginning color, and deep violet touches to suggest it in with the color scheme. Soft blue, with a hint of lavender in stades, are also "just right" for the color scheme. MRS. F. S. T.
