Thirty-nine Overcome and Hurt. Women Rescued at Ordnance Building Blaze

TAKE POWDER TO SAFETY

Nineteen firemen were overcome by moke, twenty others slightly affected or injured, and eight women were reseued at a fire which caused heavy loss at the United States Ordnance Departments' building, 1710-1712 Market street. A quantity of gunpowder was rushed from the place.

The blaze, which started at 7 o'clock last night, tied up surface trolley service for three hours and attracted a crowd estimated at 30,000 persons.

Several rescues were made at the risk of life and one fireman was drawn risk of life and one areman was drawn through an opening in the sidewalk by men who formed a human chain. The firemen fought for hours, handi-capped by smoke which rolled from the capped by smoke which rolled from the basement, where the blaze started. To get at the fire holes were cut in the sidewalk, through which lines of hose were run and firemen used a battering ram to knock a hole through a twenty-inch brick wall to permit them to direct streams into the furnace-like

Fair Token of the Spring, Arrives To Give Its Inimitable Charm To The Spring Opening Exposition

The Paris millinery so carefully selected, has arrived fresh as a May morning and abounding in surprises—so many clever novelties, so many daring innovations, so many departures from the usual ways of Hats.

Some are original present-day creations, unlike the Hats of any other time or country, others are of the Victorian days of the sixties, of the Empire or of the Directoire, and one from Maria-Guy inspired by still earlier times forecasts the Charlotte Corday mode for summer.

A Hat from Madeleine's assumes the airs of a senorita by means of the Spanish comb effect; Jeanne Lanvin introduces : . ery Oriental Turban with a very Occidental scarf, and the creations of Caroline Reboux rival a Gainsborough or a Reynolds.

In fact, each of these Milliners seems to have developed an entirely different idea, much to the charm and distinction of Spring Millinery.
