Washington, March 1 .-- Campaign cost of electing a President of the United States in 1920 were $10. 3:18,509, as estimated by a special Senate committee created to investigate them, which today filed its report with Congress. Of this amount, Republican randidates and campaign organizations spent $8,100,739, while Democratic exspent $8,100,733, while Democratic ex-penditures were $2,254,770. The com-nittee compilation took into account the expenditures made by or in behalf of all candidates for the Republican and presidential nomination Democratic and of national, state, congressional and scoatorial committees of both these parties, neglecting amounts spent by candidates and organizations of minor political partles. Senators Kenyon, Iowa: Edge, New Jersey, and Spencer, Missouri, Repubheney, and Spencer, Missouri, Kepilb-licans, and Pomerene, Ohio, and Reed. Missouri, Demacrats, signed the report, which was unanimous. While stating their conclusion that, "the expenditure of these vast sums is a present and growing menace to the nation." no recommendations for congressional action were made except that the suggestion was made that elections committee of the next Congress should consider the question. Constitutional difficulties may ntervene to prevent legislation on the , the report said, but Congress "take proper steps to submit" a constitutional amendment dealing with the difficulty "if it is found necessary." While the largest sums of campaign expenditure found were those of the national organizations, which the committee said was $5,319,729 for the Re-publican party and $1,318,274 for the Democrats, candidates who sought presidential nominations from the conations accounted for a total of $2. 980,033

General Leonard Wood's efforts to secure the Republican nomination involved an expenditure of $1.773.303, the committee found, while for Frank O. Lowden the total was $414,000; for Senator Johnson, of California, $194. 000; for Herbert Hoover, $173,000 and for President-elect Harding, $113. 000 Expenditures noted in behalf of ther Republican candidates were $77
