The Third Time Was Check-time

J. Howard Goodwin has an office in the Real Estate Trust Building, where he publishes a textile magazine, and hosts the Marine Exposition, etc. Publishing a textile magazine is enough to drive a man to limerickitis, because every day or two there's something new to report about how little clothing Paris thinks necessary. So Mr. Goodwin, who lives in Logan, sought refuge in limerickitis, and here he comes up smiling the third time he tries. His limerick was:

LIMERICK NO. 65
Said a poet with wild, woolly hair,
And a dreamy and far-away air,
"Though butchers may die
Much richer than I—
We'll both meat the good lives
up there."

HARDING'S SPEECH SHOWS DESIRE FOR PRE-WAR STATUS

Favors Cautious Entrance Into International Co-operation

LET US WORK IN HARMONY, IS PRESIDENT'S ATTITUDE

By CLINTON W. GILBERT
Staff Correspondent Evening Public Ledger

Washington, March 4.—President Harding's inaugural address is the platform of his administration. Accordingly, it is as general as a party platform. It does not concern what to do, but more definite than did his campaign address and his various public utterances since his election.

It favors a cautious entrance into international co-operation. It expresses optimistically the desire to get back to that life, public and private, which preceded the great war, before debts began to press upon us and world relations troubled us and immense problems intruded upon our consciousness.

It expresses perfectly what 7,500,000 more people voted for when they cast their ballots in November.

It is a little doubtful that the address will be applauded by a majority of 7,500,000. For it disappoints no hope of those who cast Republican ballots in November.

Harding's Idea of Leadership

It strikes the country as something different from what in recent years it has been hearing from its Presidents, the country voted for something different. This is not the speech of one-man government. The President once does not follow his idea of leadership.

Budget Tasks Are International

The most important task now facing the administration is international. The President stresses foreign relations. It is the first topic in his speech and the one that occupies most space.

WILSON GIVES ARMY BILL 'POCKET VETO'

Appropriations for Next Year $3,806,029,647—Estimates Cut $1,453,485,926

Washington, March 4.—The Sixty-sixth Congress expired at 12:30 o'clock today by constitutional limitation. Brief sessions were held in both houses, but no new business was taken on and the members marked time until the hour for adjournment sine die arrived.

Among the last of President Wilson's official acts was the giving of a "pocket veto" to the army appropriation bill. This, with the failure of the naval appropriation measure to pass, will throw upon the next Congress the necessity of providing for the maintenance of the military departments of the government to the extent of $1,453,485,926.

Text of Inaugural of President Harding

Washington, March 4.—President Harding's inaugural address was as follows:

My countrymen, when our surveys of the world about him after the great storm, noting the marks of destruction and yet realizing the magnitude of the things which without it, he is an American who breathes the clarified atmosphere with a strange mingling of regret and hope. We have seen world passion spend its fury, but we contemplate our republic unshaken and hold our civilization secure. Liberty—liberty within the law—and civilization are inseparable, and though both were threatened by the world war, and there came to Americans the uncertain question: How long will our representative government be the highest expression and surest guaranty of both.

Standing in this presence, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, feeling the emotions which no one may know until he senses the great weight of responsibility for himself, I must offer no belief in the divine inspiration of the founding fathers. Surely there must have been God's intent in the making of this new world republic. There is an organic law which and by one authority, and we are still effaced in a baptism of sacrifice and blood, with union maintained, the nation supreme and its course inspiring. We have seen the world rivet its hostile gaze on the great truths which the founders wrought. We have seen self, human and religious liberty, created and glorified.

In the beginning, the Old World sought in our experiment, to lay its foundations of political and social belief upon a new basis. It is a profound example of freedom and civilization to all mankind. Let us express our courage and strengthened devotion, in great measure, for the inaugural beginning, and after our confidence in the progress fulfillment.

Progress Proves Wisdom

The recorded progress of our republic, materially and spiritually, is itself proof of the wisdom of our fathers. We seek no part in the world's affairs, but we are to be held to the standards of the old world. We are to be held to the standards of the old world. We are to be held to the standards of the old world.
