Nancy Wynne Sees a Pretty Costume—She Tells of Sailings for Europe—And Speaks of the Sunday Evening Affairs at the Emergency Aid Headquarters

I SAW Betty Packard walking up Chestnut street yesterday morning looking very attractive in a cinnamon brown sports suit and brown fur and a hat of a rather dark henna velvet, small hat of the same shade, small velvet on which were applied...

Did you know that Mildred and Sam Carpenter, Jr., and their mother were going to Europe again this spring? Last year Mrs. Carpenter went over with Mildred and Edith, and returned in October, leaving Edith in England for a year...

There are rumors that "Why Not?" is to be given again for another year. It was so well done and every one was not able to see it, so, though it is not definitely settled as yet, I believe we will soon hear for what affair it is to be given, and when and where...

Speaking of these benefits and of the things which really take up society's time during the Lenten season when other entertaining stops, I heard a touching little thing in connection with the Charlotte Cushman Club benefit, which is to take place Friday...

That reminds me of Mr. Raiguel's account of the baseball game of our army and navy that he saw in England in 1918, when the king and queen were present to see an American game...

Have you ever gone to those evening talks at the Emergency Aid on Sunday nights? If you have not you can get for them are very well worth hearing and you are welcome without special invitation...

Willie Martin, Mrs. Thomas Robins and several others were there to receive, and there were a number of guests. These Sunday night meetings are especially interesting for the young women whose business engagements prevent them from attending many afternoon lectures in the week...
