SOCIETY RALLIES TO WIFE

New York, March 19.—Developments yesterday in the divorce action brought by James A. 'QUEEN OF HEARTS' IN STILLMAN CASE

FLORENCE HELENE LEEDS

Former chorus girl named as co-respondent by Mrs. James A. Stillman, wife of the New York banker, who is suing for divorce. Mrs. Leeds played the role of the Queen of Hearts in a Broadway playing card ballet.

'Mr. Leeds' Had Rival

It was learned yesterday that "Mr. Leeds" was not without a rival before he finally won the affection of Mrs. Leeds by a man dancer well known on Broadway. From her former chauffeur it was learned that "Mr. Leeds" seldom visited the Leeds apartment at 64 East Eighty-sixth street on Sunday, and that Mrs. Leeds, her friend, Miss May Hadden, and two young men were accustomed to make automobile trips to the beach on that day.

Not Long In Company

It was learned that Mrs. Leeds stay with her friends at the Waldorf Astor more than thirty days between her first appearance with the show and the time she had been introduced to "Mr. Leeds," it was reported that Mrs. Leeds was the friend of Mrs. Stillman, and like her, was a member of the chorus of "The Century Girl."

William Richmond, who is how connected with the Leeds case, yesterday stated that Florence Leeds did a singing and dancing act in his cabaret show at the Sinking Gardens, Newark, N. J.

Commander Holden C. Richardson, U. S. N., will be guest this evening at a meeting of the faculty and the Women's Club of Temple University.

Disturbances at the Holy Ghost Greek Catholic Church, 1928 West Passunk avenue, were related to Judge Finletter today, when the Rev. Eugene Volkay, the pastor, asked for an injunction against Frank Suda, et al., trustees, to restrain them from interfering with his conduct of masses and other ecclesiastical duties.

It was explained that the trustees ousted the pastor, Father Volkay said the trustees were without authority to remove him, as he had been duly appointed by the apostolic administrator, the successor of the late Bishop Oroski, head of the Greek Catholic Church in the United States, delegated by Rome.

Judge Finletter reminded counsel that an appeal to the courts was not the best way to settle internal strife of a church, as ways and means were surely provided by the church administrative authorities.

The letters were written in distinctly feminine hands, some were signed, others were blank, and one was signed "A Working Girl." The stationery of the missives reflected the character of the writers—some were on paper of excellent quality, and others were mere scraps picked up at city postmark.

Measles, despite her enforced absence at Laurel-in-the-Pines, Lakewood, J. Mrs. Stillman is known by her husband, and she is reported as decidedly opposed with the news given the case through the disclosure concerning "Mrs. Leeds."

But above all, Mrs. Stillman is determined that the names of the three of her children shall be kept out of the case, "not dragged into the matter," she is phrased.

"Mrs. Stillman is game," said one in a position to ascertain her reaction to the suit, and it was added, she is not fearful of the notoriety that has resulted. She was pictured as sitting back with firm lips, guarding her children and ready to fight back. "She is not afraid of anything," was a description of her, and she certainly does not fear the outcome of this suit.
