Stillman Openly Repudiates Child

Stillman—the former "Fifi" Potter—Mr. Nicoll said that his client had "refused to credit for a long time any thought which might have occurred after she may have implicated herself."

"Now, Mrs. Stillman makes charges against him," he continued. "Clearly she is entitled to a proper allowance of alimony and counsel fee. Mr. Stillman desires to be fair and generous. Mrs. Stillman must defend herself and the legitimacy of the child."

Stillman's Ability to Pay

Mr. Brennan said:

"Let us take this case and get down to brass tacks. We are not here asking for generosity. We are here to assert our rights. We want an opportunity to find out what these warrior-like people are up in the wilds of Canada and we want especially to know what they have to do with this case."

Mr. Brennan added that in the last eight months Mr. Stillman has contributed more than $20,000 for the maintenance of his children and $40,000 in alimony for his wife. He said, in referring to counsel fees, that Justice Morschauser, with his experience, would do the proper thing.

Mr. Nicoll said the only desire of Mr. Stillman in the matter of alimony was that he could grant Mrs. Stillman sufficient money to allow her to live in reasonable luxury.

Attorneys for the plaintiff brought out that the largest request for alimony in a court in New York state was in the Gould case, when the sum then asked was identical with the present request.

Child's Guardian Defends Legitimacy

John E. Mack, guardian ad litem for Cora Stillman, twenty-eight months old baby whose paternity is questioned in the case, told the court he wished to correct Mr. Nicoll's statement charging that the baby was illegitimate.

"The evidence before the referee," he said, "does not show any other person than James A. Stillman to be the father of this child."

In his reply Mr. Nicoll said he had referred to documentary evidence presented to the court. Mr. Mack replied that neither by affidavit nor testament had anything indirectly been placed in the records to impugn the legitimacy of the child.

Justice Morschauser remarked that the mother stood for the paternity of the child, while the father attacked it.

"Isn't that the big point in the question of compensation?" he asked, adding that sufficient counsel fee, in consideration of the attack made on the child, should be allowed.

Mrs. Stillman to Deny All Charges

Abraham Levy, of attorneys for Mrs. Stillman, then stated:

"She fights not only for the life of her child, but for the life of her child. This case has not yet been tried. When it is tried, she will prove her denial of all the allegations as to her infidelity made by Mr. Stillman."

"I will take these papers and have it out at home," said Justice Morschauser. "I can't let the press have these papers until they are passed upon."

Justice Morschauser then asked the lawyers where they wished the papers to be filed, in Westchester, Putnam or Orange county. Mr. Brennan and Mr. Nicoll said it was immaterial.

Suit to be "Open and Above Board"

Justice Morschauser then said he would enter the final papers in the county clerk's office of Westchester county, but added that he would order the county clerk to transmit the papers to Putnam county, where the action originally started and where the papers will be filed.

On the question of where the papers should be filed, one of the attorneys remarked with a smile: "There might consult the convenience of the large number of newspaper reporters assigned to the suit."

Justice Morschauser, at this juncture, reiterated that the entire proceeding was a public matter, and that he intended to have everything connected with the suit conducted "openly and above board."

Various papers were then handed up to him by attorneys for both sides. Justice Morschauser said that both sides could submit replying affidavits in regard to the motion for alimony next Saturday morning at Poughkeepsie, where he has his chambers.

"There will be no more arguments on this motion," said Justice Morschauser. He stated that the next phase in the motion for alimony and counsel fee would be his decision.

McFadden Says Maid Named Wife in Plot

witness paused again and turned to his attorney.

"Was that the question you wanted, Mr. Bell?" he asked. His counsel replied: "That is about it."

Mr. Bell then turned toward the defendants, remarking: "It will all be developed later."

Continuing, the witness stated that Madame Aubeelet a week ago had told him that District Attorney Taylor had said he could go abroad. At this the former governess mended a vigorous affirmative.

On further direct examination it was developed that Madame Aubeelet had breakfasted with Mr. McFadden and the children.

Arrest Followed Accusation

On cross-examination Mr. Weeks, for the defense, said:

"It was not until after Madame Aubeelet had accused your family of the theft that you had her arrested?"

Yes, was the reply.

Mr. McFadden stated that the former governess had told him that her social position was such that she could not associate with the servants. He added that he thought, since, therefore, that Madame Aubeelet should talk to Blanche, the maid.

This brought from Mr. Weeks:

"Well, you often have occasion to give orders to your servants don't you?" The witness replied he did.

"And you are polite to your servants aren't you?" said Mr. Weeks.

"Yes, for I don't take risks with them," the witness answered.

Before the hearing began Mr. McFadden was told some persons believed there was little evidence against the two women.

"Well, we are going to offer something this morning," he said. "I can tell you this is a clear case of blackmail. These two women have been waiting to get back to France for some time. But they needed money. We will show that Madame Aubeelet attempted to blackmail me for $50,000 in return for telling where the jewels were."

Took Kindly Interest in Maid

Referring to Miss Maguff, Mr. McFadden added that his wife "took a kindly interest in the former maid because the maid was supporting a child."

Mrs. McFadden was the first witness. Questioned by Mr. Bell, the society woman repeated details of the disappearance of her jewels.

Mrs. McFadden, on cross-examination, testified that the night she last saw a large rope of pearls she had been wearing at a dinner party in her home was when she removed the pearls in her bathroom and placed them on a dressing table. She admitted the bathroom shutters were open and that the shades were up.

The witness said she awoke next morning at 7 o'clock, but did not inspect the jewel case until two hours later. She said she could not state positively the jewels were stolen during the night.

There is no access to the bathroom except through her bedroom, she stated. A breakfast room adjoining the bedroom can be reached through a hall door, she continued. The door of the breakfast room was not locked, but the wood was warped so that opening it caused a noise.

Such a noise, she said, she believed would have awakened her. Any one passing through her sleeping apartment from the breakfast room would pass the foot of her bed, she testified.

Window Was Not Locked

Replying to the defense counsel, the witness said her bedroom was ventilated through a window in the combination bathroom and dressing room, and that the window was not locked.

Mrs. McFadden hesitated when asked to place a value on the rope of pearls, finally estimating it between $125,000 and $150,000. Referring to Mlle. Maguit, she testified the maid had been in her employ ten years, had traveled abroad with her and had sometimes been entrusted with jewels.

"Was it at your instance the maid was arrested?" Mr. Weeks asked. The witness gave a negative answer.

"Was it with your approval?" the lawyer continued. This brought an objection from Mr. Bell, who said the commonwealth was interested in the prosecution. The question was withdrawn.

Continuing under cross-examination Mrs. McFadden said Captain Sweeney, of the Radnor police, had taken fingerprints of persons inside the house and those housed in the estate's garage. No evidence was found, she stated, that any one had entered through the bathroom window.

Speaking of her lingerie, which had been left in the bathroom, Mrs. McFadden said it was the practice for the maid to remove and press it before Mrs. McFadden awakened. The pearls, she added, usually were kept in a gold box on a dressing-table in the bathroom, although on warm nights the pearls were placed in the bedroom.

Occasionally during the examination, when asked details about the interior of the house, Mrs. McFadden had to appeal to her husband for the information.

Assembly Facing Big Heap of Bills

tion of the motion-picture people to pass the burden of this tax, if it becomes a law, along to the audiences. The movie fans will foot the bill in the end.

It has already been pointed out how the anthracite coal tax, if it also is enacted into a statute, will be added to the price of the consumer's winter coal bill.

No valid reason can be advanced by the anthracite operators against the imposition of a tax a ton on their production. It is a moneymaking proposition for them if they follow the course pursued in the past.

If a tax of four or six cents a ton is imposed, they will immediately advance the price per ton not four or six cents, but twenty-five cents.

That is what they did under the Brumbaugh coal tax bill which was decided unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

As for the state manufacturers, they have had their swords and bill hooks out against a proposed tax on them ever since before the present session opened.

Gas Men Also Active

Natural gas producers are tuning up. They, too, will increase the price of gas to the consumers if their product is taxed.

And so it goes all along the line. The public is to be made the goat no matter who or what is taxed. It is a case of paying the fiddler without the opportunity to dance.

On the face of the state treasurer's statement of estimated income there is not included certain amounts set aside for specific purposes and not available for appropriation by the Legislature.

Among these things are the sinking fund, $8,658,920.26; the motor fund, $8,714,741.01; state bond road fund, $8,202,552.80; federal appropriation for vocational education, $246,250.91, and a lot of minor items, the whole amounting to $11,242,962.79.

Assuming that with an unexpended balance of money from former appropriations of $15,000,000, there would still be but $85,000,000 left for the present Legislature to dispose of, and the estimate of appropriations to be made already runs in excess of $100,000,000.

It has been pointed out that the state of New York with 10,300,000 population has reduced its appropriations to $135,000,000. But the fact is overlooked that this amount is for the state of New York's needs for only one year.

Pennsylvania with 8,720,000 people would on this basis be entitled to spend $112,000,000 annually, or $224,000,000 for two years.

Asks $50,000,000 a Year

Pennsylvania's budget instead, as estimated now from the demands made upon its revenues, is slightly in excess of $100,000,000 for two years.

New York's expenditures amount to about $13 per capita per annum while that of Pennsylvania is less than half that or about $6.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are striving to avoid additional taxation. The appointment of the committee of three to devise new schemes of taxation that will not affect them is evidence of this.

It is claimed that the farmers today are the least considered of all the working millions in the state. Prices of farm products have been tumbling for months, but the cost of farm labor, mill feeds, livestock for replacements and implements, are about as high as ever.

The instance of the chicken farmer is mentioned conspicuously. The price of eggs has dropped nearly, if not entirely, 75 per cent in the last nine months, but labor and feed have been lowered but little.

These facts are recited by rural members as a background for their claim that the agriculturists are unduly taxed. Hence the demand for new subjects of taxation.

There will be, as I have pointed out above, a wretched mess in about two weeks unless these questions of taxation, revenue and appropriations are speedily settled.
