The concluding orchestral numbers Mrs. Medill was president of the were typically Easter music, being the "l'arsifal," the Good Fri day music from the same work, and th 'Easter Overture' of Rimsky-Kor-akoff. Of these numbers, the prelude eakoff. was the best played, besides being the finest piece of music. The Rimsky composition, which Mr. Stokowski has not rendered so effectively as it was last season, as the tempi seemed some-what hurried in places, and there was not the religious atmosphere which was one of the leading characteristics of the overture as played before. However, its on the program, coming after the two Wagner numbers, may have had omething to do with this effect. The soloist was Jacques Thibaud, who perhaps wisely, changed his selection from Brahms to Lalo. The Spanish Symphony is one of the most charac-teristic of French compositions, very much as Mr. Thibaud is one of the most representative of French violinists. The work suits his style as do few other of the larger violin compositions, and it was beautifully played throughout. parently easily overcome, but the chie uture was a piquant and essentially French interpretation entirely different from many of those which we have heard in Philadelphia in the last few years, but which could not fail to be recognized immediately as the correct Violinists who essay Symphonic Espagnole in Philadelphia in the future will be judged largely in interpretative values by Mr. Thibaud's
