

TODAY BRINGS MRS. WILSON'S FRENCH COOKING LESSON

Foreign Housewives Roast Meat in Same Way That Americans Broil—Directions Given for Boiling, Pot Roasting and "Charring"

By Mrs. M. A. Wilson

ROASTING meats, as practiced by the French housewife, is entirely different from the methods used in this country. The meat to be roasted—beef, mutton or lamb—is placed in a roasting pan with the direct heat of the open flame, exactly the same method as is used in this country for broiling.

When salt is sprinkled or rubbed on meat, it must be constantly turned to insure even cooking and also to prevent burning.

Meat cooked in this manner loses less per pound than that which is baked in a dry heat.

Roasting meats, as the American housewife understands this term, consists of seasoning meat, dusting with flour, adding water to the pan and then baking in a hot oven.

To broil means to char. This method is the oldest form of cooking. Very early records of history tell us that food was placed on pointed sticks and then held near the flame to cook.

Broiling is the method used for cooking fish, chops, fish, chicken, game, ham and shell fish.

To broil in the Gas Range Place about a quart of water in the broiling pan; add a tablespoon of salt. This will prevent the fat from taking fire and also permit the fat to be removed when cooking.

How to Broil Rub the wire rack of the broiling pan with a piece of suet and then wipe the meat and lay it on the broiler. Place about four inches from the direct flame.

To Test Press the meat while broiling, and if it springs it is still raw. When it just begins to set and become firm it is done.

To Pot Roast Select any cut of meat that suits both your eye and your pocketbook, and then wipe the meat with a damp cloth. Now tie securely with butcher's twine

Two Minutes of Optimism

Do You Belong to the "Haves" or to the "Have-Nots"?

HENRY L. DOHERTY, for the past few months the most-talked-of man in New York, never had a chance in life.

He was born fifty years ago in Columbus, O., at which time that now thriving little city was nothing more than a whistle-stop for hurrying locomotives.

Young Henry was twelve years old when his father, always more visionary than practical, died, whipped out and discouraged, leaving a widow and four children unprovided for.

The little lad sold newspapers, tended furnaces, ran errands, delivered groceries, worked on an ice wagon, put in some time in a rolling mill, potted around a printing plant and finally wound up as handy man in the local gas works.

He had a few dollars in his pocket, but he was not a rich man. He had a few cents in his pocket, but he was not a rich man.

BLACK AND GREEN IS SOMETHING NEW

Green is forsaken, yellow forsworn. But blue is the luckiest color that's worn.

Blue is heavenly, truth, love, constancy, fidelity. In the United States flag blue is love, faith and steadfastness.

Green is jealousy, but also immortal hope, especially of the eternal life and victory. It is the color of the laurel and the palm.

Green is an ominous color for lovers to be married in. The old doggerel runs: Those dressed in blue have lovers true; In green and white forsaken quite.

At the same time Shakespeare and the older poets praise a green eye in the lover as a sign of ardent love and constancy.

There is a belief that green or yellow looking eyes belong to a jealous disposition. Shakespeare alludes in "The Merchant of Venice" to green-eyed jealousy.

The Question Corner

Today's Inquiries 1. Describe a charming lampshade for the little girl's room.

2. What bizarre bit of adornment is found on a new high comb for the hair?

3. How is a sideboard for the dining-room fashioned, which is highly attractive and does not take up much room?

4. What takes the place of feathers or gauze in the newest French fan?

5. In what way is a quaint pair of andirons for the nursery shaped?

6. When embroidering an initial on a Turkish towel, how can the work be done in an easy and good-looking manner?

Yesterday's Answers

2. A new and extremely useful device, which has recently been invented for the talking machine, accomplishes the winding of the machine automatically.

3. Tan taffeta, with a twisted band of this material and blue horse-hair straw, forms an attractive small toque.

4. Window draperies of figured voile are arranged in an original way by having a valance across the top of plain colored voile to match the fringe around the edge of the curtains.

5. Black leather fashions a combination music roll and vanity bag, which folds three times and has one of its sections devoted to a tiny mirror, a powder puff and a small change purse.

6. Bright plaid gingham makes an original trimming for a white muslin fudge apron.

Early Planting

When it comes to planting in the garden, the plants that have been grown in boxes cut them apart with a cube of soil around the roots of each.

Turn the plants in pots are jarred loose, turning the soil around the roots of each. Then set with the stem of the plant downward, with the first and second fingers of the left hand. Where the tin cans without bottoms are used, the ball of earth is pushed nearly out of the can.

The plant is then set with the can sticking up around it as a protection against cutworms. After a week or two the can is lifted over the top of the plant.

"Spring Weather Is Treacherous—Better Take a Wrap"

That is the advice generally given when a Spring-time outing is planned.

It's pleasant advice to follow when wraps are as pretty as these.

Between $49 and $89 there is a wonderfully fine assortment of beautiful wraps, coats and capes of soft, luxurious materials—Orlando, twill cord, duvet de laine, Caledonia, Bolivia, tricotine and camel's-hair.

Many are copies of far more expensive models and each has a touch of individuality.

The scalloped coat, that is sketched, is of navy blue tricotine with a black satin collar and silk cords. $49.

Bolivia makes the loose, flaring coat with kimono sleeves and contrasting wool embroidery. In Nankin, brown and tan. $59.
