

FADED CHORUS GIRL ACCUSES STILLMAN

Former Broadway Favorite, Bitter at Banker, Gives Wife Evidence

NAME IS STILL WITHHELD

New York, March 29.—In a squall of New York detectives employed by Mrs. Anne Urquhart Potter Stillman have found the woman who has been writing a series of letters, she bitterly assailed Mr. Stillman. It was made known yesterday that the letters first came anonymously. Further were signed by a woman who a few years ago was rather celebrated along Broadway for her beauty and charm.

In those days this woman lived in expensive hotel suites and in apartment houses where rents even then were bidding to ordinary folk. She was equipped to automobiles, a yacht and a place on Long Island and in Florida. She disappeared from all this several years ago.

And now this woman says she wants to become a voluntary witness for Mrs. Stillman, whose husband, James A. Stillman, president of the National City Bank, is suing for divorce. Further, she is alleged to be the name to be set forth in the additional affidavits Mrs. Stillman's lawyers propose filing immediately after Justice Morschauser delivers his attorney and counsel fees decision this week.

Once a Chorus Beauty Reliable sources divulged yesterday that this woman's letters assumed the nature of a history of days when the writer knew Mr. Stillman. The name of the woman was not made known, nor her present address. Nor did the source of this information go into any detail regarding the alleged facts contained in the letters. But after this new personality was added to the Stillman romance (she was found last week) the detectives went about seeking to verify the woman's story.

Just how much of it they corroborated is a matter of conjecture. But it was learned that there was ample justification for the drawing up of a new motion charging that Mr. Stillman was once as fond of this woman as he is alleged now to be of Florence Lawlor Leeds. And, like Florence Leeds, the other woman is said to be the producer of the chorus. The story goes on to say that the new woman in the case was found last week; that she was living in a scantily furnished tenement flat that she was almost without funds and so bitter that at first she refused to talk to the detectives and lawyers, but insisted upon being taken to Mrs. Stillman.

To Testify for Wife Mrs. Stillman came to New York from Lakewood last week, and it is then she is supposed to have communicated with the new woman. New is said to say that the stranger wants to testify in Mrs. Stillman's behalf. That she will be called upon appears to be a moral certainty unless the banker withdraws his original charges against his wife or the suit and counter-charges are dropped by mutual consent or arrangement. It was learned that this woman as-
