

accepting German manufacturers. The treaty of Versailles required Germany to deliver shipping to England in making for the recovery of her submarines. The result of this is set forth in a recent address of John Foster Dulles, one of the American experts at Paris, Germany fulfilled this provision of the treaty. The Hamburg shippers' busy building ships. The British shippers were idle. A vital British industry was threatened with extinction. Finally the British had to tell Germany to stop making up for the devastation of the war and to risk her to take back some of the ships already delivered.

German Diplomatic Provocative
Great Britain is supporting France on the amount of reparations and in the occupation of the Rhine area. Knows well that reparations can never be paid in the only way—big loans—big loans paid by other nations. In the shipping of goods. She cannot have taken the steps she has taken in order to demonstrate to Germany that further demands of military nature are not a means of collection.

Either Germany is going to stop accepting the war reparations and the war of economic further step must be taken by France. The situation will probably come to a head on the first of May. Germany has many factories under the guns, comes due. It is reported that Germany will refuse to make this payment. German diplomats were yesterday in negotiations to have been proposed.

She has started to refuse to pay an offered payment that was totally adequate in amount. Germany is not only refusing to pay but she is following a policy of stopping of providing to pay and demanding the money. Germany is not only stopping the payment but she is demanding the money. Germany is not only stopping the payment but she is demanding the money.

American Attitude Important
The American attitude toward the French policy regarding Germany is highly important. It may be said that the United States has a right to be satisfied, wherever it may be, with the French policy. It would be ill for that would be necessary to divide Great Britain from the French. The United States is highly desired by France, but it is not expected. France's attitude is always the best that can be given. It is almost all that France can give.

At this point in the negotiations with France, it is not possible to say whether the American attitude is the best that can be given. It is almost all that France can give.

MISS JOSEPHINE LENDER SHONTS SUIT ROMANCE

Couple Who Met at Stock Farm Auction Now Wed
Dispute over the Bucks county estate of Theodore P. Shonts, wealthy New York traction magnate, a year ago, in part led to a romance which culminated yesterday in the marriage of Carl Lundersher, son of a lumber merchant in this city and Miss Josephine Lender, twenty-one years old, of Middletown, N. J., at the home of the bridegroom's parents, 162 Apsley street, Germantown.

The former Miss Lender was an important witness in the legal battle instituted by Mrs. Shonts against another woman named in the deceased magnate's will, for the recovery of a large portion of the Shonts estate. She is the daughter of Adolph Lender, at that time overseer of the Shonts estate in Bucks county. Miss Lender was employed as a bookkeeper on the estate when the farm and stock were disposed of.

Carl Lundersher, who is twenty-one years old, attended the public sale of livestock on the Shonts farm, and purchased eight prize Holstein cows. While the sale was being recorded, he met Miss Lender.
