JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of Several Small Dinners and Dances Held Saturday—She Expresses Regrets About Mrs. Jacob Waln's Accident

THAT was a fine party the George Joneses gave out at the Whitemarsh Hunt Club for Catherine Coxe and Andy Porter on Saturday. They are to be married in June, I hear, by the way. The party was principally for members of the younger married set, and Letty McKim, a sister of Eleanor Jones, entertained at dinner, and there were several other dinners before the affair.

JIM CARTER gave a party on Saturday, too, out at his parents' country house at Chadds Ford, for about fifty guests, and in honor of Theodore Dean, who comes from Buenos Aires. S. A. Mrs. Aleck Brown, Mrs. William Biddle Cadwalader and Bessie Thompson Drexel received the guests. Semphorosa Bristed came over from New York for the party, and so did Katharine Emmet, who is one of the Dahlgrens, you know, and a first cousin of Sarah Penrose. The Alexander Biddles, Joe du Barrys and Standley Stokeses were there, and so were Kitty Penn Smith, Sarah Penrose, Margaret Dunlap, Polly Thayer, Mary Law, who is a second cousin of Jim Carter—her mother was Miss Eugenia Carter—and Polly Thayer, Christine Cadwalader and her cousin, Jessie Da Costa. And, of course, a number of men. It was a wonderful party, I hear, and every one had a marvelous time.

Speaking of Christine Cadwalader reminds me I saw her just the other day wearing a small black straw hat, which fitted rather tight over her red curls. She is very tall and slender.

And fun! There were two other girls with her, and the giggles from said group were almost uninterrupted all through luncheon, for it was at luncheon at one of the cafes that I saw her. And she was the leader in the talk, I could see. She's a mighty jolly little somebody.

I SAW Mrs. Emile Geyelin the other day at the bank drawing a check. She was evidently getting ready to go South, for you know she went down on Wednesday or Thursday of last week to Savannah to attend Page Anderson's wedding, which took place on Saturday. Page, if you remember, was a bridesmaid for Cecily, who was married the Saturday before Lent, and she asked her to return the compliment and be one of her attendants. Page Anderson married Harry Platt, a son of Mrs. Charlie Platt and nephew of Heide Norris and Mrs. Frank Thorne Patterson, of this city. And they are going to live here, too, I understand. The wedding took place in the South, and quite a number of Philadelphians went down. Harry Platt's brother, the late Charlie Platt, 3d, married Dorothy Sims about fifteen years ago. He was a most attractive fellow, too, and made such a gallant fight for life. He was ill for several years, and had to live in the Adirondacks for a long time. Mrs. Platt and her two children, Dorothy and Charlie, live on Gravers lane, in Chestnut Hill, and young Charlie is a student at St. Mark's School.

EVERY ONE is very much upset over Mrs. Jacob Waln's serious accident on Thursday of last week. She and Mr. Waln were on their way to Washington and at Baltimore, as they went from one car to another, on their way to or from the dining car, I have not heard which, Mrs. Waln, thinking that the car platform was down as usual, stepped a little to one side, lost her balance and fell from the train just as it began to get under way. They found her on the track, her shoulder broken and her side badly injured, and just think of poor Mr. Waln on the train and unable to get them to stop at once. In fact, I understand it was nearly half an hour before he could get the train stopped and get back to her at Union Station.

She had not lost consciousness entirely and had been able to give her name and they were taking her to the Mercy Hospital there. Her daughter, Mrs. John Baird, has gone down and Mrs. Alfred Maule, another daughter, and Mrs. Alfred Morris, too, were going to Baltimore to be near her. Mrs. Waln is one of the loveliest of women and her accident has proved a great shock to her family and friends. Mr. Waln is a brother of Mrs. Charles Custis Harrison.

AFTER a week of almost unthinkable gayety spent by members of the school set, they will settle down this week and go back to school. Go to the theatre a bit now and again and to the dancing classes, which will soon finish, too, and perhaps a small party here and there, and I wouldn't wonder if the girls and boys would be just as well satisfied. After all, they are not especially grown-up, now are they? The other night after one of the parties I happened to be in a train into which a number of boys and girls came and several of said boys being extremely ogle walked on into the smoker instead of staying with the others. And as I got off at my station I happened to look into the smoking car and there sat one who is very, very grown-up at the parties facing two others. Was he smoking? He was not. He was pulling long pieces of chewing gum from between his teeth, folding it over, and placing the end of it back again into his mouth in the most perfect "little-boy" manner I have seen for many a day.

NANCY WYNNE.

She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids. A breakfast for the immediate families followed in the blue room. Miss Patton, who was educated at Miss Somers' School in Washington, and also in Paris, France, was active in Red Cross work during the war.
