XV.—In the Heart of a Diamond

MAY CHRISTIE

"It's strange," Dick said, "you're being mixed up in all this. I mean, it seems almost as if fate..."

neck he always wore this diamond as a mascot. It happened to be with him when he died—an awful riding accident. I didn't do anything any- way else wouldn't have done, but he was a sentimental old fellow..."

DO YOU EVER OBSERVE THE LITTLE THINGS OF LIFE?

Most People Pass By Without Noticing Them, but if You Look Out for Them You Will Find Life Much Fuller and More Interesting

WHAT do you see as you go through life? No, I don't mean trees, people, houses, automobiles—I mean little things that stay with you afterward..."

"For instance, when you get on a trolley car, are you like the average person who notices first whether the car is too full to push into from the platform, then whether there is any empty seat, then, subconsciously, what street car is coming to, and finally that it is time to get off?"

"If you are, you miss numbers of those little things that are such an important part of life. The things that keep today from being just the day after yesterday and the day before tomorrow..."

Adventures With a Purse

IT STANDS to reason that days like these, those we have been having turn our thoughts to the porch, providing, at ways that one have a porch. Out on the old porch chairs, and new coats of paint, and maybe there are provisions made for at least one new chair. Particularly if a new chair is as smart as the one I saw this morning about can be had for the price of the name. This chair is a Canton porch chair, hour-glass shape, and is being sold at the special price, or to freshen up or come at the most three blossoms. This chair is in old rose or a kind of tan, and costs seventy-five cents.

Another shop is having a sale of ivory colored celluloid brushes and mirrors. I picked a mirror up and examined one, and I can vouch for it. The color is very good. And I saw a set of brushes. There is an opportunity to get a white toilet set, or to freshen up as you have had for a long time.
