The Mule Cloun By DADDY

Man-Thin Man

"BALKY SAM'S circus had a sidehow Balky Sam upset that sideshow with one of his tricks." Thus Judge Owl began his evening

"In the side show, sitting next to each other, were the fattest man on earth and the thinnest man on earth. The fat man was so fat that the elephants used to get out of his way to give him room when they saw him coming, while the thin man was so thin that not even the enakes stirred from his path, for they thought him only a walking shadow.

The fat man got fatter every day, and that was because he ate so much. laughed so much and moved about so little. At the same time the thin man got thinner every day because his stomwas out of order, which made him yery little, act sour all the time ent very little, act sour all the time ent very little, act sour all the time and keep in a nervous fidget.

"Balky Sam used to grin and heehand at the fat man because he was so fat and at the thin man because he was so thin. But after a time Balky Sam grew sorry for them. He was sorry for the fat man because the fat man was so fat he couldn't dance or play or have a good time like other folks. He was sorry for the thin man was so thin ho was only skin and bones, and if he tried to dance or play he would be liable to fall to pieces. Besides, Balky Sam was afraid if the fat man grew say fatter he would burst, and if the thin man got any thinner he would fade out of sight like a whist of cigar smoke.

"How can I save the fat man from getting any fatter and the thin man from getting any thinner?' asked Balky Sam one evening when he was talking the matter over with the animals in the menagerie tent.

The way to cure the fat man is to get him to jump around as I do, squeak-ed Jinks, the monkey. ' And the way to cure the thin man

'Balky Sam pranced up to the fat man. 'Hee-haw! You eat too much. Get up and jump around,' brayed Balky am. nipping the fat man's shoulder.
"Go away!' yelled the fat man, thinking Balky Sam had gone mad.
Balky Sam laid back his cars, gave a frightful hee-haw and bared his big teeth as if about to take a bite of the the fat man again, and he rose to his feet. Balky Sam whirled around and gave him a little kick. 'Go away!' shricked the fat man once more. Balky Sam rushed at him with wide-open

"At that the fat man dld something "At that the fat man did something he hasn't done in years—he began to ran. He ran out of the dining tent into the show tent, and around and around the race track. Right behind him, uttering frightful brays, came Balky Sum, pretending he was going to gobble the fat man.

"Around and around the fat man bent going, and when once he got starthe couldn't stop. And as he ran tot in him began to melt and to run treams down his face and his side and his legs. He grew lighter with

"Now when Balky Sam began to chase the fat man every one in the ching tent began to laugh. And the ore who haughed the londest was the an. It was very, very funny to see the fat man run and losy

"When the thin man laughed it shook up his stomach, which was just what his stomach had needed for years and years. The shaking cured the stomach and the stomach began to want real food instead of the crumbs of hard cracker. The first thing the things. cracker. The first thing the thin man knew he was enting the fat man's platof corned beef and cabbage. And the plate was clean the thin man back to the cook for more. He sent tack to the cook for more. He see and be ate, and before that night was ever he was spoiled as a thin man, he had begun to get fat.

"As for the fat man, he ran until Balky Sam could chase him no more. When the fat man stopped running he was so tired he fell right down and went to sleen and he couldn't

"A good Wanamaker quality taffeta or tricotine or tricolette dress at $5? Impossible," says the average woman. She knows how much the silk or tricotine costs a yard, she knows what a dress costs to make. But she is not counting on the irresistible force of circumstances which induces a manufacturer to cut and make more dresses than his orders call for and which unexpectedly thereafter causes him to sell for much less than they cost to produce, because of suddenly slackened demand. In such emergencies Wanamaker's has again been able to secure its own choice of models and materials at a quarter, a third and a half less. Not trash, not "seconds," not old goods, but only the satisfactory goods known as Wanamaker quality.

Large Hats With Flowers Arrive-$6 and $8

Among many other new hats, the large hats with flowers are to be seen, probably hurried in on the whispered word from Paris!

Something graceful and feminine about them, and women like to revive the fashion every now and again to keep it from passing altogether. Most of the hats are of hair braid or soft straw in dark colorings, and white flowers are used as well as the gay field variety.

Canton crene hats, some trimmed with felt, are among the newest, and very pretty and smart, too, in their lovely colorings.
