It is the route taken by Franklin in his journey from Roston to this city that will be followed as closely as possible when the trip from Philadelphia to Waterbury is taken.

At the University the statue way guarded by a detachment of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, of Penn Dr Josiah H. Penniman, acting provest o the University, in an address, dwelt upon the virtues of the great American and his services to his country.

Then thirty or more wreaths were laid at the feet of the statue by a built ber of patriotic societies. There also were wreaths from the Philomatheau Society and Zelosophic Society at Penn and the senior class. The University band played.
