TODAY IS MRS. WILSON'S FRENCH COOKING LESSON

Meroton Style Beef Is Delicious With Brown Gravy or Sharp Sauce—Garnishes Made of Beets, Carrots or Turnips

THE piece of boiled beef, particularly if it has been used in making soup, has on account of its unsightly aspect, received little or no attention beyond being utilized into hashes and stews, etc.

When ready to remove the meat from the stock, place it in a bowl and cover the stock, place it in a bowl and cover with a small plate or saucer and place a weight upon the plate to make the meat more compact. Allow to cool and then chill. It is easier to cut or slice, if it is a good plan to tie the meat securely into shape with a piece of tape or heavy butcher's twine. This will prevent a rough appearance when cut, after cooking.

To serve boiled or boiled beef:

Meroton Style

Cut sufficient cold, boiled beef in thin slices. Make two and one-half cups of rich, brown gravy and then lay the slices of meat in the gravy, add

One cup of sliced onions,
One teaspoon of salt,
One half teaspoon of pepper,
One half teaspoon of mustard,
One-quarter teaspoon of mustard.

Simmer very slowly for one-half hour and then lift the meat on slices of toast and pour the gravy over it and then garnish with finely minced parsley.

Before planning other dishes it would be wise to understand the method of making brown sauce for serving the beef.

Brown Sauce

If you have bed dripnings skimmed from the top of the soup kettle, lift this into a small saucepan and heat to melt. Strain into a small bowl. Place one-half cup of this fat in an iron frying pan or skillet and add one-half cup of flour. Stir and cook until a dark mahogany brown. Now add

Three cups of cold stock or water,
One salt teaspoon of poultry season ing,
One teaspoon of salt,
One half teaspoon of pepper.

Bring to a boil and cook slowly for five minutes. Turn into a strainer or sieve which has been lined with a piece of cheesecloth and then gather the corners of the cloth together and start twisting or wringing until the sauce has passed through the cloth. Turn into a bowl and let cool. Use equal parts of this sauce and boiling water to make the desired amount of sauce for the various dishes given in this lesson.

Boiled Beef With Sharp Sauce

Prepare as for Meroton style and then add

Six tablespoons of sharp cider vinegar,
One-quarter cup of finely chopped pickles,
One quarter cup of finely chopped parsley.

To serve with brown horseradish sauce add three tablespoons of freshly grated horseradish to the sharp sauce and serve.

Boiled Beef Italian Style

Slice the beef in neat pieces and then place in a casserole and cover with three cups of brown sauce and add

One cup of sliced onions,
Two bits of garlic,
One green pepper, minced fine.

Sprinkle the top with three-quarters cup of coarse bread crumbs and three tablespoons of grated cheese and bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes.

Italian Boiled Beef With Macaroni

Cook six ounces of macaroni and then turn into a baking dish. Now prepare the beef as for the Italian style and then turn the macaroni over it and bake for one-half hour.

Flemish Boiled Beef

Cook two packages of broad noodles and then drain. Mince three onions very fine and then place five tablespoons of beef drippings in a frying pan and add the onions. Cook slowly and then add the noodles and cook slowly without browning for ten minutes. Place the noodles as a border around the large hot platter and then sprinkle over them

One cup of fine dried bread crumbs,
Three tablespoons of grated cheese,
One-half teaspoon of savoury seed.

Lift the beef which has been prepared Meroton style to the center of the dish and then garnish with finely minced parsley.

Fry the crumbs in bacon or ham drippings and use very coarse crumbs. Place four tablespoons of drippings in the frying pan; when hot add the crumbs and fry until golden brown, tossing continually.

Emince of Beef With Green Pepper

Cut enough meat in small dice and then heat in just enough brown sauce to hold together. Serve on toast and garnish with finely minced green peppers.

This dish is frequently prepared as above and before adding the garnish, it is covered with a thick white cream sauce and sprinkled with grated cheese and then with minced pepper.

Beef Croquettes

One onion,
Four branches of parsley,

With sufficient cold, boiled beef, put through the food chopper enough to measure two cups. Turn into a saucepan and add

One-half teaspoon of salt,
One-quarter teaspoon of pepper,
Pinch of thyme,
Six level tablespoons of flour,

Now stir with a fork to mix and then add three-quarters cup of milk. Stir to blend well and then place on the stove and bring to a boil. Cook slowly for five minutes and then turn on a plate and let chill. Form into croquettes and then roll in flour, dip in egg and milk and then roll in fine crumbs and fry a golden brown in hot fat. Serve with parsley, tomato, cheese or sharp sauce.

CHECKED GINGHAM IS PRACTICAL FOR SUIT

By CORINNE LOWE

Enough to make of the mermaid a mermaid maid these new bathing suits! This costume of today's drawing is brown and white checked gingham trimmed with four ruffles on the skirt and tied with a sash of red satin, echoed by the cap. This costume has the shoulder-to-shoulder neckline. Many of the other fashionable water togs, however, the Eton collar.

Adventures With a Purse

YOU remember last year how you could buy ruffled organdie for a dainty summer dress? Well, this year, improving upon the former idea, the shops are now showing dotted organdie. There is green or lavender or old rose or blue with white embroidered dots. Or you can buy it in white with black, blue or old rose dots. Most any pattern you would choose would be effective. The price is $3 a yard.

Let me remind you once more, if your hair is falling out, of the hair tonic combs. They have four rather broad teeth, which are hollow, with openings at the end of each. The other end of the comb has a rubber bulb attached to it. This one fills with a good hair tonic and puts it through the hair and in the scalp by means of the comb. In this way the tonic is well distributed through the hair and can do its best work. The price of one of these combs is thirty-five cents.

One shop has some dozen or two hairpins that I want to mention, because they impressed me as being particularly convincing looking. They are aluminum backed, and some of them have their surfaces completely covered with brilliant, well-cut white stones that twinkle almost as dazzlingly as real diamonds. To me they look like much higher-priced pins than $3.65, which is what they cost. I understand, however, that originally they did cost more.

Seeing the cold cream cloths again suggested that I write of them for the benefit of the women who missed reading about them before. These cloths resemble thin sheets of cotton, although, as a matter of fact, they are, I think, a very soft tissue paper. After you have cleansed your face thoroughly with cold cream you use one of these so-called cloths to remove the cream. It is quite as efficacious as cheese cloth, and is really more sanitary, because you need use a cloth only once and then it can be thrown away. Two dozen cloths can be bought for twenty-five cents.

Making More Money

Worthless Land

"I don't know what I can do for you, son, particularly as there doesn't seem to be a thing open to this part of the world and I know that you would prefer to remain here, if it were possible. While you were in France I sunk all the available money I had—really more than I could afford—in that land I was speaking about. It now appears that it wasn't worth a tenth of what I paid for it, for it's so rocky and barren that nothing will grow. I've tried every crop imaginable, but it's no use. The land simply won't produce. But, if you think you can do anything with it—it's yours."

Leonard Brown listened to his father's dissertation in silence and with something that was closely akin to regret. For personal reasons he wished to remain close to Newmarket, Va., but his army training had not fitted him for any of the civilian positions which were then available. However, it could do no harm to go down and look the land over. There must be something that would grow there—something which his father had overlooked.

The next afternoon when he returned there was a quizzical smile in young Brown's eyes and more than a hint of an upward twist to his lips as he remarked: "I think I can make use of that land, dad. There's one crop you didn't think of—tourists." Despite the efforts of his family to make him stay more, he declined. The following morning he visited the president of the local bank and, after a lengthy interview, emerged with a capital sufficient for the purpose he had in mind—the exploitation of no less than eight natural caves glittering with the beauty of stalactites and stalagmites which he had discovered during his exploration trip. Electric lights soon enhanced these beauties and a little teahouse nearby reaped an additional profit from the caves, which experts say are more beautiful than Luray and which are drawing thousands of tourists every season to a rather out-of-the-way section of Virginia.
