

ARON SPROUL BILL PASSED BY SENATE

Vare Move to Regain Hold on Cleaning Contracts Faces House Fight

FARMERS "WANT TO KNOW"

By a Staff Correspondent. Harrisburg, April 21.—The Aron bill, the opening of the operation of the contract street cleaning system, was passed finally in the Senate today.

There appears to be no question but that the Vare interests will back the bill to the limit.

Independents, however, are manifesting a lively interest in the plans of the Vare combine and it is likely that a strong fight against the bill will be made in the House.

Rural members, who have read the sign, as they approached Broad Street Station, "The House will not pass the bill," will now go to the House.

The anthracite tax bill passed in the House yesterday by a vote of 125 in favor and 63 against, and goes to the Senate for final action.

Full Force Mustered. There was some opposition to the bill, in fact, the largest opposition that has yet been rolled up against any Spruol administration measure.

There was some opposition to the bill, in fact, the largest opposition that has yet been rolled up against any Spruol administration measure.

The remainder of the Philadelphia members voting in the negative are of both Vare and Penrose factions.

In answering his objections, Representative Williams, of Tioga, sponsor of the bill, gave figures of coal mining for many years back, and said that, for decades, Pennsylvania's natural resources had been taken away, never to be replaced, and that the State should receive recompense for these depleted resources.

He said that on the basis of the tonnage mined in 1920 the State would receive $9,000,000 if the present tax had been in effect.

Representative Ogle, of Somerset, asked why the State should penalize the coal companies, and pointed out that the amount of the tax to the price of coal had been taken out. In reply Mr. Williams referred him to Representative Dawson, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. Dawson said he had been responsible for the change and had done it because the State was not receiving its share of the tax on each individual ton of coal, which would be unfair to the coal industry.

Representative Fowler, of Scranton, the labor leader in the House, also spoke against the bill. He said the taxing of the anthracite industry was unjust, because no single industry should be taxed more than another. He said he would like to see the price of coal increased, because it would be shared on mine-labor, and the public would say their demands for wages were keeping up the price of coal.

Tells of Benefits. Representative Dewey, of Tioga, opened the debate with rousing adjurations to the members, and referred to the bill simply because it was opposed by big business interests. He said Pennsylvania needed better schools, better highways and a better forestry system, and this tax was needed to supply these things.

After that, the vote was taken, and resulted in a victory for the Administration. The bill now goes to the Senate.

It is believed the anthracite coal tax will join the other revenue measures in the Senate Finance Committee, and that all will be brought out for final disposition early next week.

All the tax bills are in Senate Committee. The gasoline tax will probably be amended so as to exempt the tax from and exempt from taxation all gasoline used for motor traffic on the highways.

It is likely that the theatre tax will be amended so as to apply to the gross receipts of theatres, but to each ticket sold, which will supply a method more to the liking of theatre managers of assessing the tax, as each ticket is sold, just as the Federal tax is now assessed.

House Spoils Bill to Aid Contractors. Continued from Page One. Efforts to boost political aspirations of certain of their superiors will be certain in favor. This is one thing the regular payrolls of the office cannot hide.

Interest Bill in Danger. The new auditor general's very audacious bill to increase the rate of interest on state moneys deposited in various banks will probably get up against a snag in the Senate. There are even rumors that the bill will be dropped in the well of forgotten things and never one submitted.

the clash of arms and the sound of rude and unclassy oaths can be heard from the Capitol down to the Susquehanna's bank.

BLOCK EYRE'S MOVE AGAINST JUDGE HAUSE

Harrisburg, April 21.—Senator Eyre was balked in his effort to eliminate Judge Hause from the Chester county bench when the Senate committee on judicial appointments yesterday struck out the clause in the appointment bill that was intended to reduce the number of judges.

The clause was inserted by Eyre for the apparent purpose of giving vent to his feeling against Judge Hause, who is a Democrat.

This sentiment of Chester county on the subject was reflected by a delegation of lawyers and business men who appeared before the committee to protest against the proposal to eliminate Judge Hause. They brought with them sufficient proof to show that the business of the Chester County Courts would be seriously affected if the number of judges were reduced.

All factions and parties were represented in the protesting delegation, which was led by Colonel A. M. Holding, a prominent member of the Chester bar. Colonel Holding told the committee that the people of Chester county learned with amazement of the Eyre amendment and were quick to realize the detrimental effect its adoption would have on the courts of the county.

BILL LAYS HEAVIEST TAX ON AUTOTRUCKS

By a Staff Correspondent. Harrisburg, Pa., April 21.—The Buckman automobile bill amending the registration laws is a combination of Senate and House bills amending present automobile laws.

Following a joint hearing before committees of the Senate and House, numerous changes were made in the measure, mostly in connection with the commercial hauling vehicles, which are now taxed on the basis of weight.

The bill would permit a person absent from his county on election day to cast a ballot by mail, after having followed regulations prescribed to identify him as a qualified voter in the precinct in which he desires to cast a ballot.

Finds Real Sense in Bacon's Cipher

Study of the Baconian cipher has revealed, Dr. Newbold said, that much of the knowledge considered strictly a modern development was well known to the medieval monk. Because he feared his theories might conflict with the accepted notions of the day too strongly for his own safety, Dr. Newbold believed, Bacon hid them away under the difficult layers of his cipher.

Used Strange Jargon. "As it is difficult to write sense when hampered by the rules of cipher which Bacon used," said Dr. Newbold, "Bacon usually wrote in a strange jargon of the alchemists. Few people understood it, and so he could write nonsense without arousing suspicion."

He probably was successful beyond his fondest dreams. For more than six hundred years this preposterous non-sense which his professors told how to make gold has been studied by gold seekers. It has been translated into most modern languages, and few have suspected that all this hoax of a cipher letter is in fact a simple jargon of Bacon's printed works, and there exist in manuscript other alchemical works, probably of the same character.

The cipher letter in question seems to consist of a mixture of Roman and cipher letters. In reality all are mere shams, having no meaning as far as present known language is concerned. It is very simple. It consists of twenty-two letters derived from Greek shorthand. All the letters are either straight lines or simple curves made at various angles to the base line. Out these letters his bogus letters, concealing them by many ingenious devices.

Dr. Newbold said that it might be possible to decipher the cipher letter as a whole, in spite of the tremendous difficulties which the old schoolman had put in the way of commentators. The speaker cited numerous scientific discoveries made by Bacon and concealed in his cipher, rediscovered at great pains and after many years by more modern investigators.

Rail Problem Discussed. Dr. Johnson, speaking on the rail-road problem, said that the government should proceed with plans for the grouping of all railroads into a limited number of competing systems of comparatively equal strength.

Any discussion of the transportation problems now confronting the American people," said Dr. Johnson, "must be based upon the assumption that rail-road transportation can be successfully developed only by adhering to private ownership and operation. If the people of the United States become discouraged or bewildered and adopt government ownership, the railroads will gradually pass into a state of coma, and our industry will slowly come a creeping paralysis."

HOLD-UP MEN GET $185

Cincinnati Business Man, Guest Here, Says Bandits 'Worked Fast'. Joseph A. Hartung, a Cincinnati business man, was held up by three armed men at Eighteenth and Chandler streets last night and robbed of $185.

Mr. Hartung, who is connected with the Waterproof Paper and Board Co., lives at 427 East Sixth street, Cincinnati. He is a guest at the Adelphi Hotel.

"I saw the three men just ahead of me," said Mr. Hartung today in describing the hold-up. "As I was about to pass them one grabbed me around the body, another poked a revolver in my face while the third searched my clothing."

"They were fast workers. The third man just patted my pockets, locating a wallet in one hip pocket which contained $185. Then they beat it. I don't know whether they had an automobile or not. I was a little too nervous to note many details. The robbers appeared to be twenty-five or thirty years old."

MEDELSSOHN CONCERT

Chorus, Assisted by Splendid Soloists, Gives Fine Program at Bellevue. The Mendelssohn Club, one of the city's best choral organizations, assisted by May Eberly Hotz, soprano, and Michel Penha, cellist, two of Philadelphia's most capable artists, gave a delightful program at the second concert of the club in the Bellevue-Stratford last evening.

The audience was large and thoroughly appreciative of the splendid choral and solo numbers which were performed. Naturally, the Mendelssohn Club gave the principal numbers of the concert. Mr. Norden evidently chose the choral selections with an eye to diversity of sentiment, as well as to exhibit the vocal and musical capabilities of the organization.

The chorus is well balanced and has the very unusual faculty of singing eight and ten voice combinations with a strict adherence to the balance of parts, with the even more rare quality of uniform dynamics. At times the choir part lost in the involved counter-point of the accompanying voices and the crescendos and diminuendos, the latter, the most difficult effect in musical performance, were beautifully done. The whole work of the chorus showed depth and assiduous rehearsal and a thorough knowledge of the compositions.

Of especial interest was the eight-part anthem, "Then Shall the Righteous Shine Forth," by Miss Frances McCollin, of Philadelphia. The composition having been awarded the prize in the contest conducted by the Mendelssohn Club last year. The composition is devoted to feeling and the workmanship is of a very high order both contrapuntally and in part writing. There are many trying modulations in it which are effective and which were finely done by the club. Miss McCollin was present and was obliged to rise and bow in response to the hearty applause of the audience. Among the other notable choral numbers was an exquisite serenade by Arensky, a cappella with cello obbligato, an enormously difficult but equally effective piece of writing for the cello and beautifully played by Mr. Penha, and a musically and clever arrangement by Mr. Norden of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Song of India" for eight-part chorus with soprano solo. The latter part being most beautifully sung by Mrs. Hotz. The program was one of the most artistically arranged that has been heard in this city for a long time, as the soloists, in addition to the purely artistic numbers, were given the opportunity of showing their capabilities in ensemble, a far greater test of musicianship and one in which both of these fine artists proved themselves to excel.

In her solo numbers, Mrs. Hotz's superb voice was heard to great advantage. Her selections covered a wide range of vocalization and musicianship, from a simple lyric to elaborate coloratura, and all phases were equally well performed. Mr. Penha added to the impression he has already made in this city of being a great artist who possesses a wonderfully beautiful tone (the first requisite of the cellist), and has the even more rare faculty of subordinating a marvelous technique to the musical requirements of the composition.
