

PENN MEN START STUDENT CAMPAIGN

Undergraduate Council Takes Step to Limit and Improve Class of Enrollments

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED

The first step of an organized campaign to limit and improve the student body of the University of Pennsylvania developed when the undergraduate council, composed of students, class presidents and nine members chosen at large, met last night.

Well-known University men in athletics and other activities will form delegations to the different schools and will speak at assemblies and in class rooms.

Although this is entirely a student affair and has no official backing from the trustees, the council is believed to be already in line with the agitation which has been for some time afloat in both bodies, to limit the student body and improve its tone.

Morris S. Hegarty is head of the newly formed committee which holds its first meeting at 5 o'clock today. Its advisors are J. C. Delmonico, J. C. Thompson, Henry Baxter and Donald Spitzer.

The committee is composed of sports managers and captains, publication boys, color theatrical stars, three representatives from the college, Warton and Towne Scientific School, class presidents and nine members chosen at large.

ALLEGED ROBBER HELD

Story of Fortune-Teller Told by Prisoner Fails to Impress Magistrate

An inscrutable fortune-teller, whose hand had been considerably "crossed," told Louis Sanders, a Negro, Wood street near Tenth, he was "coming into a lot of money in the near future."

Louis told Magistrate Deitz all about it this morning when he had a hearing, charged with attempted robbery, but the magistrate held him in $500 bail for court.

Louis yesterday decided to make the fortune-teller's prophecy come true, according to Patrolman Fabek, who heard a woman's screams and saw Louis running out of the tobacco and candy shop of Mrs. Laura Gutowska, 2000 East York street. The patrolman caught Louis at Belgrade and Dauphin streets and took him back to the shop.

Mrs. Gutowska claimed he had taken $20.83 from her cash register, but only $0 was found on Louis, who admitted later to stealing that amount, but denied knowledge of the rest.

Smartness in every line

—backed by unseen rubber

ALL the style and warmth of a custom-tailored topcoat—all the protection of a sturdy raincoat—that's what you get when you buy a U. S. Raynster.

Right into the fabric are built six light layers of rubber—so thin and flexible you'd never know they were there. Yet this rubber backing gives perfect protection always—sheds the hardest rain.

Raynsters are made in dozens of smart fabrics—worsted, yarn, heather, tones—for men, women, and children. Some models have the rubber on the outside—for firemen, policemen, farmers, drivers, and all who work outdoors.

Ask for Raynsters at any good dealer's, or write to the Philadelphia Branch of the United States Rubber Company, 525 Market Street, for address of your nearest dealer.

Look for the Raynster label!

United States Rubber Company

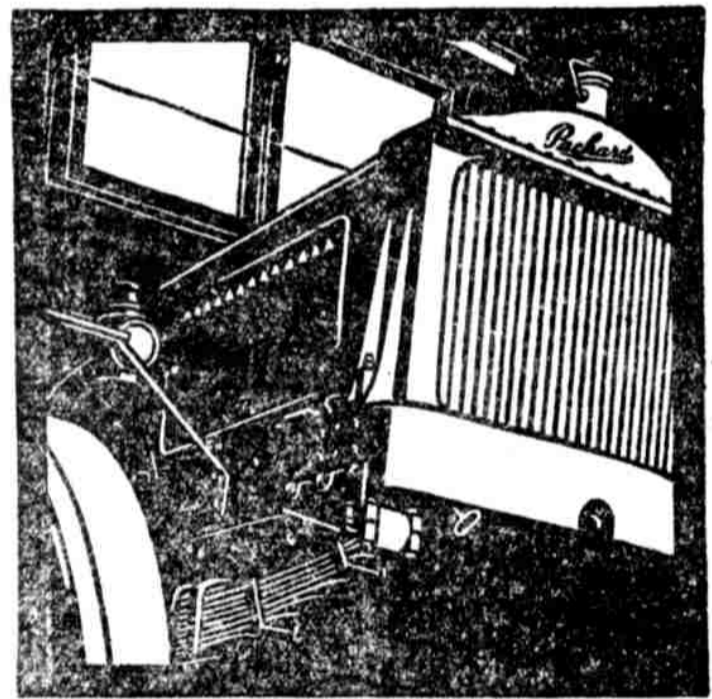

The inner side of the fabric is coated with at least six thin layers of rubber, which are cured in one solid piece—proof against the hardest rain. The completed coat is so light and flexible that you'd never know there was any rubber between the outer fabric and the lining.

PACKARD

Some trucks are priced less than the Packard Truck, but we are sure there is none that costs less. For every dollar you invest in a Packard, you will take out a higher return in profitable hauling done. Out of every dollar a Packard will earn for you, you will have to spend less on operation and upkeep. And your original outlay for transportation will hold good through year after year, as your Packard Truck goes on delivering its full usefulness year after year. These things are more than a matter of opinion with us. They are a matter of record in the haulage costs of every line of business that uses a Packard. Our Freight Transportation Department will be glad to show you reports—some of them perhaps covering your particular type of hauling—proving that the Packard Truck actually is the lowest-cost truck on the job.
