Fred Fulton and Homer Smith Each Score One-Round Knockouts in Heavyweight Bouts

FRED FULTON WOULD ACT AS UNDERSTUDY IN HEAVYWEIGHT MIX

Ponderous Plasterer Ready to Sub for Dempsey or Carpentier, but Tex Rickard Hands Him the Ice. Says Frenchman Can't Win

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL,
Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

FREDWARD FULTON, the furious plasterer, is one of the most ambitious heavyweights in the world, but nobody is getting him a rumble. Fredward is all trained up and ready to fight, and would be the busiest guy in the world, only he can't get matches. He says so himself.

Mr. Fulton was employed here last night against a person named Jack Bell, who hailed from some place in the West. He had a slight workout and then gave serious thought to business problems on hand.

"I'm the guy that's getting all of the bum breaks," said Fredward furiously. "I am matched to meet a bimbo in Jamaica last week and I make a trip to New York. I get to the fight club and there's a bum crowd, but I tell my manager I will fight anyway.

"I am sitting in the corner ready to go and the bimbo steps in. He goes to the promoter and says:

"'Where is my 750 bucks?' I want the dough in my hand now or I don't go on.'

"Can you beat it? That's more than me shave and I am getting 30 per cent. Well, the bimbo doesn't get the dough and he puts on his overcoat and fades out. That leaves me all alone in the ring and the crowd won't stand for a solo, so I have to leave.

"That's the luck I am playing in. I am in good shape, anxious to box any heavyweight in the world and can't get a rumble. I have a swell idea, but it has flopped. I couldn't put it over. Now, get this.

"I see Tex Rickard and I tell him I will substitute for either Dempsey or Carpentier on July 2. It's a good stunt, because if the mob gets in the arena and Dempsey or the Frog breaks his hand or neck or something, I am all set to step in and give the spectators a run for their money. You see, I will keep myself in great shape and be the official substitute. Honest, I can lick either of them, but they are sidestepping me.

"Ain't that a real idea? Tex Rickard ought to fall all over himself in accepting it, but instead he hands out the ice. He listens and at the end says nothing. Couldn't even get a run out of me. But he will be sorry of something happens to one of the fighters. He can't get a heavyweight as good as me and that being the case, the whole show will go flooie. But no can't blame me. The public can't either. I did my best.

"Want to know what I think of the fight? Dempsey will win in a walk. I saw the Frog beat Beckett and he didn't look good. Also, he hasn't been fighting for a long time and you know a guy has to fight to be in shape. Jack outclasses him and honest, he will kill him.

"A[N]D," continued Fredward the Fierce, "if Jack doesn't do it, I will. See if I don't. All I want is a chance."

Holdout League Weakens as Season Rolls On

ONE by one the ballplayers are returning to the fold. The Cincinnati holdouts, with the exception of Heinie Groh, have signed the papers and Heinie is expected to kick in any day, now. Unfortunately for him, Pat Moran has a great trainer in Sammy Bohn and Heinie is not missed. Therefore, his salary demands are received with the ears.

The latest to come back is Bill Rariden, the catcher. Bill opined he would stick to the farm this year and retire from baseball for all time. He kept his promise, but crops were not good, time was hanging heavily on his hands, and it was all going out and nothing coming in. Then he wired frantically to Garry Herrmann that he had decided to become a ballplayer again and the retirement stuff was all bunk. Bill now will be the third catcher with the Reds and will divide work with Wingo and Bubbles Hargrave.

In a way, Rariden's case is similar to that of Art Fletcher of the Phils. Art has retired, not because he wants more money or anything like that, but because he feels that his business will not allow him to indulge in the national pastime this year. He is kept busy straightening out his father's estate and when seen by President Heydler turned a deaf ear to all propositions relating to a big salary increase.

Fletcher is likely to suffer the same as Rariden. He will find that Collinsville, Ill., is not the busiest town in the world and when the weather gets warm and the baseball teams are going good, the shortstop is expected to reconsider his action in stepping out of the picture. At least Bill Donovan seems to think he will be back.

Cincinnati, by the way, has been playing fairly good baseball thus far. They were aided by the losing streak of the St. Louis Cards, but the Cards turned around and started a winning streak of their own in the last series. Perhaps Groh would help some, as will Rousch and Kopf, when they get into condition. The Reds will not be such a bum ball club in a month or so when all of the players are hitting on all cylinders.

Our A's will be kept busy here the remainder of the week. Today they finish the series with Washington and then will mingle with what is left of the Boston Red Sox. After that they go into the west, visiting opponents in the West and will not be back for nearly a month.

THE western invasion will be interesting. Washington and New York will have a chance to see how good they are against Cleveland, which seems to be the best team out in that section.

Brooklyn Looks Like a Mint

BROOKLYN has a white-haired, ruddy-cheeked, jovial-appearing citizen who has the right dope, which is a slang way of saying he is a wise bird. This same person, as you have probably deduced, is none other than the well-known Charles "Double-header" Ebbets, owner of the champion Brooklyn Dodgers, who have been libeled under a lot of other monikers that don't mean anything.

Anyhow, who can prove that Charley Ebbets ever bought a ball player kindly step forward and claim the reward, which consists of the wind generated the last time Babe Ruth missed a curve.

It simply isn't done in Brooklyn.

Yet twice recently that Brooklyn bunch has turned loose a lot of jack in the faces of the other National League conspirators. In 1916 and again last year they copped the old flag while a lot of other teams like the Giants and Cubs were going out with bundles of coin to embrace anything that looked like a ball player in an effort to head the stampede.

In the six years since Uncle Wilbert Robinson took the helm Brooklyn has won two pennants and as Uncle Wilbert can be purchased in the open market, for was deeded to Jawn McGraw, he is always willing to help out an old friend even if it does a-mailing him to Brooklyn.

DURING the last few seasons there are few Brooklyn players to appear a great total job. The team has always been quite near the top of each pitcher. Ever look at the schedule for a pitching and batting race. It looks like a motorcycle race. Ever see what we mean. Ebbets has gone in for all kinds, descriptions and personalities in the way of players, and such fellows as Cutshaw and Olson, Mamaux and Grimes, Griffith and Miller, and Ruether and Coveleskie, Carters and also Mallees, and then get the same thing over. Maybe Brooklyn just like a mint.

Rest of Team Not Strong

THIS year is the same old story. Brooklyn is getting passable pitching but poor batting and fielding. Some Brooklyn starters seemingly along depending on that pitching staff to win a pennant, which would finish below the Phillies of the old days. Fans hanging around with blood in their eyes waiting for a chance to get in the box.

The grand total of the runs by the Brooklyn outfit this year consists of three. Sam Post acquired one run in the game with Brooklyn last fall when Babe Ruth was on first and Ed Konetchy was on third. Brooklyn got him one before and he was on third when he was put out at Pittsburgh. But the Pirates had no use for him and he joined Konetchy on the Brooklyn coaching lines. Post is helping Wilbert Robinson with the pitchers. While Konetchy is a member of the coaching staff of the Mare Island, Cal., Navy Yard baseball team. The team is managed by Wilbert Robinson, who is said to be a fine player and came from Salt Lake.

The rest of the team has been gotten from the bushes and the minor league scrubs. Most of them were gambling when asked about the team tried to waive them out into the real baseball league. A few came in trades, but most was after the material traded for them had been collected in the waiver route and given such a chance to make good or to read doing from the bush.

ANY of the situations almost every other team in both leagues has offered Uncle Charley Ebbets everything but a pre-midday ration headache to a couple of regular ball players to exchange some of his pitching staff, but Charley Hughes's "hold and collect" daughter and wife has continued for ball players as long as he has a pitching staff.

A'S DEFEAT GRIFFS; PHILS LOSE IN NINTH

Perry Gives Macks Second Win Over Senators—Hubbell Fails at Finish

LOCAL MEN HIT HOMERS

The A's and Phils will have to try once more to win ball games on the same afternoon when the Mackmen go after their third straight against the Senators and the Donovanites clash again with the Robins in Brooklyn. To date this season the local clubs both have lost on the same day, or one team turned in a win while the other was defeated.

Yesterday was the Athletics winning day, while the Phils were turned back and incidentally gave Brooklyn its eleventh straight victory. Scott Perry was in swell form and his speed was too much for the Griffmen by a 6 to 1 count, while a ninth-inning rally enabled the Robins to continue soaring, 4 to 3.

Joe Dugan hit a home run for the A's and Wrightstone socked one against Brooklyn.

Perry held Washington to three hits, the first coming in the fifth round. Only thirty-four Washington batters faced him in the nine innings.

In the sixth he lost control and walked both Judge and Milan. Two were out at the time. Then Sam Rice, the mighty hitter of the Washington team, pumped a clean single to right and Judge here home the only enemy run of the game.

Dugan Hits Homer

Erickson started well, but faltered. Joe Dugan got him on the road to ruin in the fourth inning, when his homer went into the left-field seats. The Macks were aggressive and scored in the next three innings and built a lead that was too much for the Griffs.

After Erickson went wrong, Courtney, a rookie pitcher, finished and was socked hard.

Dugan, with a home run and a double, led at bat for the Macks, while Witt produced a double and a single.

The Athletics showed a lot of dash and pep that delighted a large crowd. The team looked like a regular ball club for a change. The A's now have beaten Washington twice in a row, a team that badly crippled the Yanks in a recent series.

Hubbell Weakens

Wilbur Hubbell, the former right-hander of the Giants, allowed the Dodgers two runs and two hits in the second inning, and no hits or runs in the next six rounds. The Phillies had gained a lead, 3 to 2, in the first six innings and the Dodgers were one behind as they went in to Brooklyn's half of the ninth.

Then came one of those batting bursts which have made the Dodgers the freaks of the major leagues this season. Jimmy Johnston began the ninth round with a single to right. Tom Griffith sacrificed. Zack Wheat's long single to center scored Johnston with the tying run. Ed Konetchy followed with his second triple of the day, a wicked grounder to right field, scoring Z. Wheat with the winning run.

Leon Cadore started for the Dodgers, but he failed to go the distance. Three runs and seven hits were made off him before he retired at the end of the sixth. John Miljus pitched two-thirds of the seventh, after which he was taken out to let Southpaw Clarence Mitchell pitch to Williams, with Neale on third and Rawlings on second. Mitchell caused Williams to fly to Griffith, retiring the side. Mitchell finished the game and was the winning pitcher.

Wrightstone's liner came for the Phils in the ninth with Meusel on.

Bingles and Bungles

Our A's are booked to clash once more with the Washington Senators here this afternoon. The Phills have a day off; they then begin a series with the Braves at Boston.

This afternoon a contest at Shibe Park will begin twenty minutes later than usual to allow the school children and teachers of at least. The game is a benefit affair for the public school Health Fund.

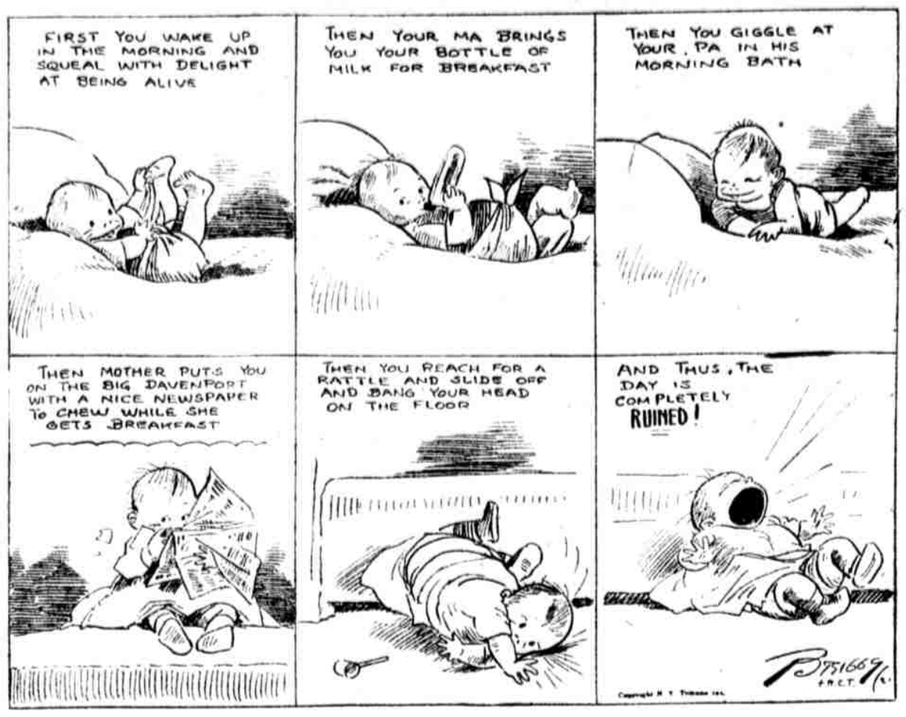
Princeton and Penn play two games this week. The first is this afternoon at Princeton, and the other is at Franklin Field, Saturday. That will be Straw Hat Day.

Tierney, of Pittsburgh, is the ten swatter in the National League. He is hitting .417. Ralph Miller is third in the senior organization with .406.

Pittsburgh continues to hammer the ball well in the circuit. Yesterday the Pirates downed the Cubs, 4 to 3. The Pirates have lost but three games this season and have won thirteen.

George Keller made his seventh home run of the season. He has also had two triples. Keller is leading Ruth in home run smashes.

HOW TO START THE DAY WRONG



RUTH BALL DERIVES $1200 FOR CHARITY

Autographed Sphere of Slugger Auctioned Off Three Times at National Bouts

FRED FULTON SCORES K. O.

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

Boxing fans love a heavy hitter, whether in the ring or any other branch of sport. This was proved at the all-heavyweight show last night at the National Club, when the Bustin' Bambino's signature proved an asset for a charitable cause. Babe Ruth's signature was worth exactly $1200, which was the total sum derived in the auction of an autographed baseball for the benefit of the St. Vincent's Home for Orphaned Children, Drexel Hill.

Judge Joseph P. Rogers was the man with the invisible hammer, and after telling the fight fans there what the auction was all about bids for the ball with the names of Ruth, Connie Mack and Ban B. Johnson on it began to come thick and fast.

"Twenty-five dollars!" was the first enthusiastic offer for the ball, and quickly bids mounted until three rabid ringsiders were left in the running. "Two hundred dollars!" finally cried Charley Schwartz, local sportsman and well known for his philanthropic ideals. Samuel Lazar, a salesman, boosted this by $50 and Charley Spedelli, a grocer, made it $300. Finally a $500 bid by Schwartz got him the ball.

Auctioned Again

Schwartz immediately turned the ball back to Judge Rogers for further donations and Lazar became possessor of the sphere with a single bid of $500, and he, too, put it up again. This time Spedelli offered $200 and the ball went to him, after which he made a short address and was greeted with a lot of applause. Schwartz and Lazar also were introduced.

Then the fans settled back to see the windup between Jack Bell, 195 pounds, and Fred Fulton, 200. There wasn't much to the contest. It lasted exactly 2 minutes 50 seconds, with Fulton a winner when Referee Lou Bailey stopped the bout, as Bell virtually was out on his feet.

Bell started a rushing battle, while Fulton backed away, taking matters easily. The former tore after his taller opponent, shooting punches with both hands at Fulton's body. Fred was contented to jab and shortly had Bell bleeding profusely from mouth and nose. Fulton then hooked short and snappily several times, shaking up Bell, and after a right cross Bailey halted hostilities.

Smith Scores K. O.

Homer Smith, 194, also scored a one-round knockout when he right appercut Sergeant Billy Miller, 195, to sleep in 1 minute 16 seconds. The blow lifted Miller off his feet and he flopped flat on his back. At the count of eight the former soldier turned over on his stomach and Referee Frank McCracken finished the toll of ten.

Frankie Britton, 167, was a winner in eight hard rounds over Kid Henry, 170½. Henry showered Britton with a lot of punches at various times, but his blows lacked steam. Britton, on the other mitt, scored often with terrific punches and at the finish had Henry all but out.

The opening number between Carl Le Blanche, 180, and Jack Hamilton, 187½, was the most interesting encounter on the card. Le Blanche was the winner because of his superior cleverness and better boxing ability. He knocked down Hamilton in the first round and second round, while Le Blanche was floored in the fourth.

New Pitcher Joins Pirates.

Chicago, May 3.—John Morrison, pitcher from Birmingham, of the Southern Association, has reported to Manager Gibson of the Pittsburgh Nationals here.

LOCAL BOXERS ARE WINNERS IN BOSTON

Joe Tiplitz and Danny Kramer Score in Open-Air Bouts on Braves' Field

TREMAINE GETS DECISION

Boston, Mass., May 3.—Boston's first open air bouts of the season were staged at Braves Field and all were for a distance of ten rounds. Carl Tremaine, of Cleveland, won a rather questionable decision over Terry McHugh, of Allentown, Pa. It was all McHugh's fight up to the sixth round, he having floored Tremaine cleanly in the second.

In the sixth Tremaine, with a right swing to the jaw, set McHugh on his back. Referee Walsh, started to count. When he reached eight, for some unaccountable reason, he gave the fight to Tremaine.

Joe Tiplitz, of Philadelphia, won a neat victory over Allentown Dundee, who substituted for Frankie Britt. Britt's physician would not let him enter the ring on account of an injury to his eye.

Tiplitz dropped Dundee in the ninth and the latter was in such groggy shape when he got up that Referee Perry stopped the bout and gave Tiplitz the verdict.

Danny Kramer, of Philadelphia, won over Joe O'Donnell, of Philadelphia, in the match of the evening. It was a rip-roaring going at topnotch. The fight was very even in the early rounds. Kramer having a shade the better of it. O'Donnell had squared matters by the ninth.

In the ninth Kramer sensing that he would have to go some to win, went right after O'Donnell and all but had the latter out when the gong sounded.

Bobby Dyson, the New Bedford idol, won over Earl Puryear, of Peoria, the latter making his debut here in a typical Dyson battle. He had his man almost out in the third, only to have him come back strong in the fifth and all but put Bobby out.

Then it was anybody's fight up to the ninth, where Dyson forged slightly ahead and by particularly hard work in the tenth won out. After the fight it was learned that Dyson, who is a southpaw, had injured his left hand in the six round.

Johnny Clinton, of Boston, sprung the surprise of the evening when he took Joe Welling, of Chicago, into camp.

ZBYSZKO, NEAR FIFTY, WILL TRY FOR TITLE

Ponderous Pole May Not Toss "Strangler" Lewis for Wrestling Laurels, but He Still Is a Marvel and Has a Good Chance

By GRANTLAND RICE

THERE is very little new or novel under the shining orb of day, but once in a rare while a startling denouement takes place.

A ballplayer hitting fifty-four home-runs in one year was a trifle novel for one example.

And now we have the possibility of saluting a heavyweight wrestling champion who is forty-six years old. If that doesn't turn out to be new, you can shut off the sun.

"Strangler" Lewis, conqueror of Joe Stecher and now heavyweight champion, is booked to meet the elder Zbyszko at an early date.

Zbyszko is no longer a youth. He was not a youth when Frank Gotch threw him ten or twelve years ago.

Now he is nearer fifty than he is forty. He is past the age when men are supposed to win back heavyweight boxing or wrestling titles. He has only a few leaps to go before he reaches the half-century mark, and yet here he is challenging the champion in one of the hardest, roughest sports of the age, a sport that requires quickness, agility, stamina, skill, and all the rest of that well-known output which is supposed to be an almost exclusive possession of youth.

"Yes," you might say, "an old man in sport may challenge a champion, but what chance has he of winning?"

To which one might reply that Zbyszko threw Joe Stecher only a few weeks ago when Stecher was in first-class shape. And Stecher has thrown Lewis as often as Lewis has thrown Stecher.

An Unusual Situation

YOU may not be interested in the mere matter of Zbyszko meeting Lewis, not caring a whit which wins.

That is only a minor part, after all.

But you are either forty-six now, or you will be if you decide to keep on living.

And it is a distinct novelty to know that one at forty-six may still be the wrestling champion of the world.

It is something to let those who are bordering on fifty know that youth, after all, isn't so very far away—that youth, after all, isn't the whole show, including the elephants, the pink lemonade, the hard, blue seats and the trapeze artists. Also, the concert after the same.

If Zbyszko at forty-six can toss Lewis for a winning goal it will be one of the most remarkable achievements in sport.

And even if you are not interested in wrestling, if you are inclined to be slightly human you must be interested in such a performance.

The Outlook

THIS is not to say that Zbyszko is going to throw Lewis or plant the "Strangler's" massive shoulders against the mat.

Possibly he won't.

But we have been discussing the matter with one or two who have been working out with the ponderous Pole lately and they tell us that Zbyszko is still a marvel, possessing even greater strength than Lewis, with as much skill and as much stamina, if not quite as much speed.

They also say that Lewis will find it extremely difficult to pin the head-lock upon the Pole's hairless bean, with the aforesaid bean drawn well in between bulging shoulders.

In any event it will be one of the hardest fought matches of the year—despite the fact that the challenger is bald and bordering on fifty, which we insist upon holding as one of the most unusual turns an unusual sporting year has to offer.

It is all very well to have the kid phenoms pop out now and then. But those beyond forty who are still in championship trim where a sport like wrestling is concerned are not quite so thickly bunched.
