Nancy Wynne Talks of the Indoor Horse Show Which Starts Today—She Sees Some Smart Clothes—Tells of Colonial Dame Meeting in New York

DID you ever think it would clear yesterday, or, rather, did you think it ever would clear? I am so tired of rain I could scream. We've had so much of it of late, and we've fretted and worried for fear it would rain on this bride, or shower on that one. But with all the rain few brides really had rain at the time of their weddings. Not that it makes any difference, but some superstitious people talk so much about these things that even you and I, who are free from superstitions, of course, feel a bit queer when it pours rain at a wedding. However, after so much rain as yesterday's downpour, something tells me the rest of May will be beautiful.

AND this afternoon we have the opening of the Horse Show, that is, the Indoor Horse Show, which is to be held at the Squadron Armory, out at Thirty-second street and Lancaster avenue. And, together with the Horse Show, there is to be a dansant and cafeteria, which Mrs. Richard C. Norris has in charge. Mrs. Dilworth Beggs, Mrs. William Warden, Mrs. Isaac Clothier, Jr., Mrs. William Nicholson, Mrs. B. Lucas and Mrs. G. Hulme.

They have about forty aides, who include debutantes of last season, several of past season's and some sub-debs. Among them are Phyllis Walsh, Polly Pancoast, Gertrude Graham, Kitty Knight, who has entirely recovered from a broken leg; Maisie Stewart, Virginia Earle, Helen Sewell, Margaret Curtis, Panse Scott, Lisa Norris and Mary Norris, Dorothy Lee, Barbara Clayton, Elizabeth McElroy, Mary Siter, Elizabeth Wayne, Margaret Phelps, Helen Allen, Lily Stewart, Phyllis Swain, Louise Norris, Eleanor Lucas, Emily Bedford, Alice Sailer, Elizabeth Austin, Helen Chapman, Anna Moss, Terrell Austin, Verner Peterson, Bernice McIlhenny, Beatrice Sewell, Evelyn Page, Nancy Page, Betty Williams, Mary Allen, Sarah Large, Rebecca Stout and Frances Brazier.

Mrs. Norris, who is chairman, has issued invitations for a luncheon for the junior class of the Agnes Irwin School, on Saturday, May 14. You know Mrs. Norris' daughters, Louise and Virginia, are sub-debs and members of the junior class. The Norrises live in that beautiful house on North Twentieth street, on the grounds of the Preston Institute, of which Dr. Norris is the head.

I SAW Elise du Pont and Kitty Knight at Broad and Chestnut streets looking very smart. Elise was wearing a dark blue serge frock braided on skirt and bodice both, with dark red floss, and her small hat was of henna straw. The red of the frock was dull and blended right in with the henna of the hat. Kitty, too, looked well in a tailored sports suit of tan-colored wool and a small dark blue straw hat, which was turned off from the face.

I HEAR Eleanor Newbold is to be Frances Scott's matron of honor. She is so pretty and it will be nice to see her in the party. So many of us had to miss Eleanor's own wedding because, you remember, she was married up in Maine just before Gene Newbold went to the war. Mrs. Newbold is the daughter of the George Wharton Peppers and Frances Scott's mother was Miss Frances Pepper, a sister of Mr. George Wharton Pepper, so Eleanor and Frances are first cousins.

Anna Lewis and Lorraine Disston, who are both abroad still, but expected home this month, will be two of the bridesmaids, and the others will be Marian Grant, Margaret Davis, Mary Cuthbert Boyd, Elizabeth Derr, Dorothe Spencer and Betty Elliott, whose engagement to Arthur Pew was announced about a month ago.

MRS. VERE SPEKE ALSTON, who was Miss Anne Chew, is coming over from England this week to visit her mother, Mrs. Sam Chew, and the Colonial Dames of America, Philadelphia Chapter, No. 2, will give a tea to meet her after their annual meeting next Thursday afternoon, May 12.

Several of the Philadelphia chapter went over to New York last Saturday for the annual meeting of the Colonial Dames, which was held at the home of Mrs. Bailey and her daughter, Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris. Mrs. James Large, who is president of the local society, gave an account of the work of the society here, and the other Philadelphia women present were Mrs. George Dallas Dixon, Mrs. James Francis Sullivan and Mrs. Clyde Hambright. The meeting was preceded by several luncheons for visiting members. One large one given by five New York women at the Colony Club was attended by Mrs. Large and Mrs. Hambright, and Mrs. Dixon was a guest of Mrs. Austen Fox. Mrs. Sullivan went to the meeting after the Cameron wedding, where Elaine was maid of honor.

Besides representatives of this city there were Colonial Dames from Washington and Baltimore, and there were reports from Louisiana and other distant states. The annual meeting of the Philadelphia chapter is to be held in the chapter rooms at 400 Locust street.

NANCY WYNNE.
