LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

By Lee Page

Pop was smooking and thinking and I was doing my lessins and wishing I wasn't, thinking G, I wish pop would leave me go out for a while and get an early tomorro morning and finish my lessins.

Do your lessins, sed pop, and I sed, Wats you think, pop, I sed something in the paper about peeples branes working best only in the morning, do you believe that pop?

Well, I've herd good authority for it, sed pop, Edilson the grate inventor always gets up about 4 o'clock in the morning and starts rite in to work as though nothing had happened, and all the grate men of history and bigwigs have bin lite sleepers, so I gess if you want to amount to anything you better begin to get up in the morning about the 3rd time I call you instead of the 7th.

Yes sir, it takes a lot of practice to learn how to get up early every morning, dont it pop? I sed.

Everything worth while requires practice, sed pop.

Well, gosh, G, pop, I think Ill start practicing tomorro mornning, shall I pop? I sed.

You have my consent and my blessing, sed pop, and I sed, All rite, pop.

Making More Money

In the Open Air

"But, doctor, what can I do? I've been raised in the city and working in a factory is about all I know. It's easy enough to say that I've got to go to the country, but I'll have to live there just the same as I do in the city—and that means that I'll have to make some money."

Mary Ellerton looked distractedly. The verdict of the physician had been as she had feared. Long days of continual work in the dust-laden air of a factory had given rise to tuberculosis. Six months more, so the doctor said, would mean the end. She would have to move into the country. Arizona or the West would be better, but life in the open ought to counteract the inroads of the white plague.

Slowly the physician shook his head. "There's nothing I can suggest," he said. "I have prescribed the remedy. It's up to you to take it."

Norristown Bread Prices Reduced. Norristown, Pa., May 6.—Three of the leading bakers in Norristown announced yesterday a big reduction in the price of bread. It can be bought now for seven to ten cents a loaf.

For the next five days the girl pondered over the matter. Then, with the air of one who has the nerve to do the worst, she invested a portion of her very slender capital in an advertisement in a paper with a large rural circulation. An advertisement which stated that she would like to secure a position as a helper on some farm. Within the week, she had turned her back on the factory and was tackling the unknown problems of farm life in Ulster county, New York. Five years later she had saved enough money to make a first payment on a little farm of her own, where she started to raise chickens and squabs and handled butter from the surrounding farms on a commission basis.

Gradually her work so increased that she was in a position to bargain at the stores for the farm produce for at least twenty families in her neighborhood, for she started the plan of stamping each egg with the date on which it was laid and built up a big trade along this line. Miss Ellerton shows no signs of consumption now, for the outdoor work effected a rapid cure and she is making more money than she ever did in the city factory.
