

GREAT MUSICIANS TO HEAR MAHLER WORK

Conductors and Soloists to Be in Philadelphia Today and Tomorrow—Next Fall's Plans

Some of the most distinguished musicians in this country will be present at the performance of Mahler's Second Symphony by the Philadelphia Orchestra and Chorus this afternoon and tomorrow evening at the Academy of Music, the final performance of the season. There will be three conductors, Arthur Bodanzky, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Ossi Gabelowitch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and Rudolph Ganz, recently appointed leader of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. Famous pianists include Miss Yolanda Meyerson, Ernest Schelling and Alexander Lambert, while Miss Margaret Mazenauer and Rubin Goldmark, the composer, are others in the list of musical notables.

The performance of Mahler's Second Symphony by the Orchestra and Chorus will conclude the most brilliant season in the history of the organization. In order to meet the demand, six concerts have been added to the regular series of fifty here next season. Three of these will be for young people, for which the price of admission has been so fixed that all classes of young people can take advantage of the opportunity. The other three concerts are in fulfillment of the pledge made during the campaign for an endowment fund two years ago. The Orchestra will number 104 the coming season, ninety-six from the Orchestra this season. Mr. Stokowski will enter on his tenth season as conductor next fall.

GOLDEN JUBILEE FOR "Y"
Germantown Branch to Mark Anniversary Tonight
William Knowles Cooper, of Washington, and William S. Kingsley, of New York, will be chief speakers at the fiftieth anniversary banquet of the Young Men's Christian Association of Germantown, to be held at 7 o'clock this evening in the gymnasium. Mr. Cooper is general secretary of the Washington association, and has just returned from a trip through the Canal Zone. Mr. Kingsley is chairman of one of the largest associations in the world. Among the other speakers will be Bayard Henry, president of the Germantown "Y" from 1887 to 1917; Dr. Forrest E. Dager, William Wander and Colonel Sheldon Potter. Five hundred persons are expected to attend. There will be orchestra music, mass and double quartet singing.

Rare Butterflies to Be Shown
Butterflies from all sections of the globe, some obtained at the sacrifice of life and expenditure of large sums of money, will be shown tonight at the Hotel Belgravia for the benefit of the Speech-Reading Club. The collection has been lent by W. Judson Cooper of the Academy of Natural Science. One of the specimens is a large moth which protects itself from birds and snakes by protruding the forewing, on which the markings are identical with those of the head of the cobra.

Still printing despite the strike

TAKE A TRIP up to the composing room of the Pomerantz ruling and printing plant on the 5th & 6th floors of our building. You'll see executives and assistants with rolled up sleeves setting type, made necessary by the action of the compositors who were called out on a strike although they had no grievance and freely admitted that they did not believe this a time for any restriction of production and higher printing costs.

The action of the executives—all skillful typographers—in getting "right on the job"—shows the willingness and the determination of this company to serve well its customers.

Strike, or no strike, you'll certainly like the quality and the "get it when you want it" feature of our printing and ruling service.
