NTRUDER IN HOME CAPTURED IN CHASE

ational Park Committeeman Leads Pursuit After Youth Is Found Under Bed

LACK OF JOB HIS "EXCUSE"

Albert Dobbins, nineteen years old, of Wesley avenue, National Park, N. J., was chased through Gloucester streets early today by a dozen men, cornered on a porch and subdued with a fusillade of bricks after Miss Regina Gorman, of Gloucester, had found him hiding under her bed.

The youth told the police he had been out of work for some time. He had a paper in his pocket containing an article on finger prints, and told the police he had intended to study it. They believe he had taken to robbery because he had been unable to get work. His father is a respected citizen of National Park.

Shortly before 5 o'clock this morning Miss Gorman, whose brother, Frank X. Gorman, is Democratic city committeeman in Camden county, heard a noise in her room. She screamed and got out of bed. As she did so Dobbins, who evidently had tried to hide under the bed when he overturned something in the room, dived out and grasped her foot, ordering her to be quiet.

Mr. Gorman was awakened by his sister's scream and ran in from the adjoining room. Dobbins jumped for the hall, sprang down the stairs and ran into the street.

Crowd Joins Chase

Gorman waited only long enough to pull his trousers over his night clothes; then he sprang after the intruder. Though Gorman was bare-footed, he began to catch up with the younger fugitive. The city committeeman yelled "Stop thief!" as he ran, and men going early to work joined in the chase, while householders, awakened by the yells, threw up their windows and some of them came out to fall in the wake of the running crowd. The chase covered ten squares, and ended on the boulevard in East Gloucester.

There Dobbins turned at bay on a porch, drawing a knife and daring any one to come after him. A dozen men who had followed through the pursuit gathered around the porch and began to throw bricks.

A woman neighbor telephoned to the police and Sergeant Sterling and Patrolman Blackburn started for the scene of the trouble in the town ambulance.

Dobbins Surrenders

While they were coming, Dobbins decided to surrender, put up his knife, and was thrown into a commandeered automobile, members of the crowd riding on the running boards.

The automobile, with its load of excited men, their prisoner in the midst, and the ambulance with the two police officers, met on the road, and Sergeant Sterling thought the other machine contained robbers who were running away from the house from which the woman had telephoned.

Sterling and Blackburn drew their revolvers and threw the ambulance across the road, stopping the other car and ordering the occupants to surrender. The true situation was soon explained, and the prisoner was transferred to the ambulance, to be taken to the town hall for a hearing.

Miss Gorman arrived in Gloucester yesterday to visit her brother. She lives in Garnersville, N. Y. She said she thinks the intruder must have fallen over a chair and that the noise awakened her.

"A thrill came over me when I awoke suddenly," she said, "and saw a man's hand appear over the edge of the bed."

Miss Gorman said her diamond ring and pocketbook were lying on her bureau, but the man, when discovered, tore off so hurriedly he never bothered to pick them up.

Mr. Shallcross immediately wired his acceptance.

Letters to the Editor

Philadelphia's Dirty Streets

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—As a "clean-up week" for Philadelphia is in progress will you allow a visitor in your city to make a suggestion? For several weeks I have been in Philadelphia and its suburbs, and on the day of each week on which the householders erect their piles of rubbish upon the sidewalks in front of their homes, I have been tempted to protest loudly to "the powers that be." My home is in Boston, and if I am not mistaken we have but one such a year such a privilege, and that for two or three days the first week in May. Most of our "rubbish" is burned in our own cellars, and what cannot be destroyed is added to the ash barrels, which are on certain days set outside the cellar at the back of the house—never on the street.

The men whose duty it is to remove ashes, etc., come there for the full barrels and return the empty ones to the same place. Milkmen also come to the back of the house, icemen and delivery men as well. I think I have seen all these things, with bread and rolls added, lying on front steps of houses in Philadelphia.

I know most of the large cities of our country, and I expected to find lack of sanitary measure in the South, although they are advancing rapidly in that particular, but when I came to Philadelphia in January last, I wrote to a friend I did wish Philadelphia would clean its streets.

The streets would never be so littered if you did not have that unpleasant custom of stacking your household rubbish on the pavement every week. It goes out early in the morning as a rule, and the men whose duty it is to gather it up cannot get to many streets until late afternoon. In the meantime the "winds of heaven" have scattered all the loose papers and small stuff—to say nothing of the germs contained in same—all over the community.

This is not a pleasant state of affairs, and there is also another unpleasant aspect and that is the appearance of the street. No matter how beautifully nature has adorned the streets, or how artistically man has erected the buildings there, for hours, seemingly unlimited every week, those same streets are just lanes of dirty rubbish, and one's throat is filled with the dirt and germs that are blown about all over the passer-by.

Would not the whole question of street cleaning be infinitely less difficult to solve if the city laws would forbid such wholesale messing up of the streets?

MRS. E. F. O'LEARY.

Germantown, Pa., May 2, 1921.

Careless Motoring

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Almost daily we read in the papers reports and statements to the effect that the speedy motorist was about to be dealt with severely, and that it is to be expected that the wholesale slaughter is about to cease. The following day and the one following, etc., pass by and nothing is done, but we pick up the papers and read how many were killed and injured by the careless motor driver.

It may not be possible for the law to catch the many hold-up men who are now on the rampage in this city, killing and abusing people, and stealing from them, but it is possible to stop the slaughter of careless motoring. These men have numbers on their cars and are to be seen on our streets daily. The police must see them breaking the law, for the pedestrians who are trying to dodge out of their way see them and can give the numbers if the policemen desire them.

At the cross streets where the flagman is stationed, these drivers watch very carefully when he gives the street cars and the motors the privilege to proceed, and they at once put on steam and dash across the street at a breakneck speed, not caring whether they may be endangering the people or not, for they feel they have the right of way—in fact they seem to resent being held up for a moment to the extent that when they are liberated by the sign they act as if they would take a great delight in running somebody down.

It almost suggests a return to the Dark Ages when we consider how little life and limb are considered in these days of high speed and motorcars. If a good, strong example were made of some of these speed devils, it would break up the practice, and it is a great pity that those in charge do not have brought home to them an example of their recklessness.

GEORGE T. PALMER.

Philadelphia, May 2, 1921.

Home Prices Keep Up

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—It seems to me that about the only thing that is not coming down in price is the cost of homes and the price of rents. Both of these things are of vital importance to all, and there must be some one holding back the reductions and even causing the prices to soar. I know for a fact that the prices of homes in this city are as high today as they ever have been, and I am told that in the suburbs the prices have gone higher, and the selling prices of houses as well as the renting prices at the seashore points—especially Atlantic City and Ocean City—are considerably higher than they were last year.

All this seems to me to be unfortunate. The poor people would be able again to feel that they are coming to the right to live, with the cost prices of sugar and bread and everything in the way of fancy eatables having come down to prices that prevailed before the war. Now it is due to the people who have built houses and who own houses to come from their high perch and stop their profiteering upon the poor people. The building strikes are going to make this condition still harder for the poor people, and there could undoubtedly be some way devised to get more homes and cheaper homes for the people if the proper effort was brought about.

Country Girl Wives

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—In answer to a letter which recently appeared in the People's Forum let me say that I note what the writer says about the city fellow who marries a country girl and takes her to the city, which invariably spoils her. If so, who spoils her? The city girls, of course. Who can beat the city girls as spendthrifts and gadabouts? Nobody. I was born and reared in the country and married a farmer, but moved to town, and am not a spendthrift, either, nor a gadabout. I spend more time at home now than before I was married—not because I have to, but because I don't care about traveling around.

It is all according to what you marry for. If you marry to spend and dress, of course you will do that. I am positively certain that any one who marries for love will not be guilty of being either a "grad" or a spendthrift. If a country girl loses all her common sense on going to the city it proves there is no common sense in the city or among the city people. What is the city girl wise to? Nothing but immodest clothes, dance halls and a lot of other nonsense. If a city young man wishes to marry a country girl and take her to the city to live, I am sure she will, on the average prove as good a wife as any city girl.

MRS. W. L. T.

Philadelphia, April 28, 1921.

Why So Many Unmarried?

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—It is remarkable the many men and women over twenty-five years of age who remain single, either by preference or the ruling of fate. In most cases I find the latter prevailing. Young men whose love for quiet home life leads them to occupy bachelor apartments do not remain unmarried by choice. This I ascertain from personal experience and from the expressions of my bachelor friends. They hold the sanctity of their simple home far above the lure of the street corners, theatres, dance halls, cafes, etc.

We long—yes, we yearn—for our mate of like temperament, but, alas! few we are privileged to meet. Such young men who live lives without reproach, are pure, practice economy and have high ideas, are often accomplished in the different arts—namely, music, painting, culinary, etc.—and who would make the noblest of husbands, are destined to remain unmarried because of their high ideals, indirectly if not directly.

Life has changed since our parents and grandparents met and were betrothed—much to our sorrow. Among my many bachelor friends and acquaintances it seems to me that the consensus of opinion is that a reliable matrimonial agency is the only solution to our problem. May we not hear, through the columns of the People's Forum, from some of the gentler sex and learn their views on this subject?

HENRY L. ESSEN.

Questions Answered

Estates in British Chancery

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—In an effort to learn whether a fortune had been left to my great-grandmother and thrown into the Court of Chancery in England I wrote to the clerk in charge of this department of the government, who in reply stated it was impossible to look up the case.

Can you suggest a method by which I can ascertain whether or not the fortune exists, as I am anxious to settle the question?

G. K.

Philadelphia, May 2, 1921.

Consul General Skinner, London, states that there are no such estates and that it is not advisable to take reports to the contrary seriously. According to British law, a list of such dormant funds is prepared and published every three years. In March, 1920, the aggregate amount was about $7,250,000, divided among more than 4000 accounts.

Differences in Play Titles

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—What is the difference between a comedy, a farce and a farce-comedy?

W. W. A.

Philadelphia, May 4, 1921.

The difference between a comedy and a farce is chiefly in the plot. In a comedy the plot is subordinated to the characters, while in a farce the working of the plot makes the characters what they are. "Farce-comedy" is a vulgarism applied to nearly any type of light plays in which the comic situations go to preposterous lengths.

Indians' Voting Privilege

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Are Indians generally allowed the privilege of voting, or are they allowed the privilege only under restrictions?

W. L. V.

Philadelphia, May 3, 1921.

When the Indians are collected together and live as wards of the government, as the great majority of them do, on reservations, the government assumes the privilege, in providing for their needs, to deprive them of any voice in their own control. The Indians, generally speaking, do not seem to seek employment and have never shown much anxiety to become engaged in self-supporting measures. When the government has seen fit to subdivide Indian lands into allotments and the Indian has been put in charge of his own farm he has been accorded full citizenship, as are all Indians who assume citizens' garb, live in a civilized manner and make an effort at self-support. The number of Indians eligible at the present time to exercise the privilege of elective franchise is something more than 25,000.

Sent Incorrect Answer

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—I recently submitted the following problem to the readers of the People's Forum. A man boards the last car of a train three miles long at station A. As the train travels toward its destination the man walks through the train and alights from the first car at station B, three miles away. How far did he walk and how far did he ride? One of your readers submitted the answer that the man walked one mile and rode three. A little thought will show that the train only traveled a distance of two miles, therefore the answer was incorrect.

Answers Clock Hands' Problem

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Allow me to submit the following solution to "S. L. H.'s" problem in today's Evening Public Ledger asking at what time between 5 and 5:30 the hands of the clock are at right angles.

At 5 o'clock the hands are 150 degrees apart. The minute hand moves at the rate of 6 degrees per minute, while the hour hand moves at the rate of one-half of 1 degree per minute. The minute hand therefore gains 5½ degrees per minute on the hour hand. The problem is simply how long will it take the minute hand to gain 60 degrees (the difference between 150 and 90). The answer is 60 divided by 5½ or 10 10-11 minutes. The two hands will be at right angles at 10 minutes 54 6-11 seconds past five.

Poems and Songs Desired

Wants a Humorous Poem

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—Can you print for me an old humorous poem which contains the following verse: "Oh, well do I remember that 'Wilson's patent stove'
That father bought and paid for with cloth our gals had wove,
And how the neighbors wondered when we got the thing to go;
They said 't would bust and kill us all, some twenty years ago."

War of 1812 Song

To the Editor of the Evening Public Ledger:

Sir—I will appreciate it very much if you will print an old song written, I believe, about the time of the War of 1812. It starts as follows:

"Yet Parliament of England,
Ye Lord and Commons, too,
Consider well what you're about
And what you're going to do.
You're not at war with Yankees;
I'm sure you'll rue the day;
You roused those sons of liberty
In North America."

The publication of a letter is not to be taken as an indorsement of its views by this paper.
