

HEAD BANDIT MAY HAVE ROBBED BANK

try to Link "Big Al" and Jeronen With Girardville Case

FINGERPRINTS ARE TAKEN

Al Fox, who was killed, and George Jeronen, arrested during an attempt at hold-up in Ridley Park yesterday, may be the two men wanted for fingerprints in the attempt to rob the First National Bank at Girardville, Pa., April 28.

The three men captured in the Girardville hold-up all came from New Jersey, as did Fox and Jeronen, according to the story. On a paper found among other things and towns, according to reports.

The detective said the cashier of the Girardville bank would probably be requested to come to this city to try to identify Jeronen and the body of the man being held in the morgue of Corner Drexel and Ridley Park.

Yesterday photographs were taken and fingerprints made of both men, and the prints were sent to all parts of the country. It is thought that Fox had a criminal record and the detective bureau now wants to know if he is responsible for crimes for which the guilty person or persons are still being sought.

Detective Falvey went to Washington today to trace a bag which Jeronen was checked at Broad Street Station Thursday. He recovered it and turned it over to Ridley Park authorities. It was shipped under the name of George Sherman and contained letters addressed to Jeronen and personal effects.

Court Here Asked to Intervene in Ohio Syndicate Deal

Representing Charles H. Werner, New York, Chester N. Farr, Jr., president of the Erie Railroad, and E. J. McGilley today a bill in equity against Ervin & Co. and Randal Morgan, for an accounting in connection with the Erie Railroad Agreements for the purchase and control of traction roads in Ohio.

Ellis Ames Ballard appeared as counsel for Mr. Morgan and attacked the bill on various technicalities. Ballard's complaint is one suing former associates in an agreement to which he is not a party.

The court held the matter under consideration.

SEES COUNCILWOMEN NEXT

Odell Hauser Makes Prediction to Voters' League Leaders

"There will be women members in the next city Council and in the House of Representatives of the next state Legislature, according to Odell Hauser, of the Progressive League, who addressed the central councilwomen committee of the Women's League for Good Government today. The meeting was in the City Club, Thirteenth and Spruce streets.

"In my opinion," he said, "there will be women members in the next city Council elected, but I am sure, however, it will be wise for the council to put forward candidates in the fall election, which will be for county offices.

"There are a number of municipalities to be elected, and it might be well for some women to be elected municipalities. What Philadelphia really needs today is a militant political organization that will be absolutely independent in politics. Train women to all the machinery of politics, for the more trained they are the less you will be fooled."

PERSONALITY TESTS SHOW REAL CAUSE FOR FAILURES

Dr. S. D. Porteus Works Out Seven Psychological Reasons Why People Get Along—or Don't—Can Be Applied to Every One

Do you ever wonder why you didn't land that job with Spiffkins & Co., Inc., when you thought you'd make such a hit?

Are you puzzled because Mary Immogene doesn't seem to fall for your particular brand of charm?

Can you figure out why the boss fired you and kept that bird who didn't work near as hard as you did?

Then you haven't been tried out on the scale for measuring social character, as devised by Dr. S. D. Porteus, head of the research department at the Vineland (N. J.) Training School.

Dr. Porteus, who formerly was professor of psychology at Melbourne University, Australia, has so standardized this system that it shows in just what proportion each defect in personality keeps a person from success.

Through a system of elimination he has found that seven traits form the most common defects in personality or ability to "put things over" in the world. And those seven traits are:

- First. Lack of planning capacity, or being dependent on others for impulse and direction; the most serious drawback in personality. In a system of merit marks it would count six.
- Second. Over-emotionality ranks equally with impulsiveness.
- Third. Moodiness, persisting in any one mood such as abstinency or elation; one demerit.
- Fourth. This can be seen that to lack ability to plan and execute is six times as deleterious to success as is too much obstinacy; and so on down the line a very interesting ratio of the proportionate size of obstacles to success can be worked out.

"Personality," Dr. Porteus, who is the creator of the Maze intelligence tests, "is something behind mentality. These tests are something entirely apart from the mental tests such as the Binet. They are made on the assumption that the right social adjustment depends on the whole individual make-up, rather than on mentality.

The working out of the tests by Dr. Porteus brings a new trail in psychology. There are several mental tests, but Dr. Porteus' personality rating is an entirely new venture.

"These social rating tests, by the way, are not worked out for normal persons, but Dr. Porteus says there is no reason why they would not hold good with any class of individuals.

"The system," Dr. Porteus explained, "was worked out among the pupils here at the Vineland Training School. It had for its object the finding of a standard or scale by which it could be discovered whether an individual was able to hold his own in society."

HORSE SHOW ENDS ITS EVENTS TODAY

Final Program Promises Unusual Number of Blue Ribboners

EXPECT A RECORD CROWD

Horses and ponies, in harness and under saddle, hunters and jumpers and troop horses of the First Pennsylvania Cavalry Regiment will show their gaits in the Squadron Armory today, the final day of the Indoor Horse Show.

The first event will start at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon. It will be a showing of novice horses in harness. Exhibitions of Shetland ponies, combination classes and a score of others will follow at five minute intervals.

There was greater attendance and more interest displayed in the show yesterday than on Thursday, the opening day. It is expected that today, being a half holiday, the exhibition will draw the largest crowd was far.

Yesterday afternoon the competition was in the classes of horses under saddle, horses in harness and ponies under saddle. In the first class judged, Miss Jean Browne Scott was without equal when she drove her handsome brown mare, Sweetheart, to a run-about. Maners were especially considered. Later in the afternoon, Miss Scott met Miss Isabella Wannamaker and the Montpelier Farm winners in the heavy harness class for pairs, a most interesting event, with exceptionally high-class pairs showing. Miss Wannamaker drove her spirited and high-acting pair, Eve and Netherhall Pride, to a well-deserved victory, while the Montpelier pair was second and Miss Scott was awarded the orange.

Miss Wannamaker's pair captured the blue Thursday evening in the tandem class. In the same fields in ponies under saddle met in competition in two classes in the afternoon. In both these classes the Misses Clothier, Catherine B. and Mary, were kept competitors with the little Misses du Pont, Esther D. and Mary H. It was a rich tribute to the splendid horsemanship of Miss Catherine B. Clothier and recognition to the qualities of her mount that she won the blue rosette in both classes with Cocoa, a perfectly trained bay gelding, six years old. Cocoa took the jumps cleanly, freely and in style. Pea Blossom and Huntsman, entries of the du Pont children, were rivals in each class. Also in the heavy harness class, Princess was second in one class and received the orange in the later competition. She is the perfect grey hound type of hurdler, spirited and fast in approaching the obstacles and leaping them without any slacking of speed. Huntsman was fourth in both events. In the first decided Noel was third, but was unplaced in the second because he grazed the first hurdle. Pea Blossom was not among the awards in either, but the spirited little chestnut well merited the red rosette in the second.

PENN GIRLS TO GIVE BELATED 'REVELS'

May Day Frolic, Twice Postponed by Rain, Scheduled for 3 o'Clock

MASQUE TO BE FEATURE

A bit of "Merrie England" of the days of Elizabeth will be transplanted to the Botanical Gardens this afternoon by girl students of the University of Pennsylvania, who will hold their twice-deferred May revels.

Rain caused postponements Thursday and yesterday. The revels are scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock this afternoon and will be repeated Monday. The proceeds are for the proposed woman's clubhouse.

The girls, some clad in light draperies with mirrored trimmings, will give an exhibition of the "Awakening of Dan." The revels will be staged in the open air on the grassy slopes of the gardens.

The evening dances will be given by Catherine McCahey, Rosaline Jones, Clara Mills, Elizabeth Fennessy, Elsie Stevens, Mary Monaghan, Margaret Schell, Dorothy Hollowell and Beatrice Griffin.

A solo dance by Josephine Willis, '21, will be the feature immediately preceding the crowning of the May of Art. The coronation will be bestowed by Charlotte Esby as king of the May.

The winding of the Maypole will follow, the girls singing an old Elizabethan song as they twine the colored ribbons. The "barbarians" then give an exhibition, including juggling and fencing.

Marian Harvey, Dorothy Black and Eleanor Webster, members of the fencing team, were defeated by Bryn Mawr last week, will cross rapiers.

The antics of a trained "bear," led by a keeper, is expected to furnish amusement to the spectators. Lillian Zimmerman, '22 Education, will play the part of brain, and Jean La Mot, '22 Education, that of the keeper.

The finale will be the singing of "Sweet Day" by the undergraduates. The Women's Undergraduate Association, Margaret Frankel as queen-elect of the association, a chairman of the committee, Helena Riggs and Dorothy Elmore are vice chairmen.

Edith Morgan led music coach and Margaret Morgan dancing coach.

Fewer Deaths, Fewer Deaths in Philadelphia during the present week than occurred last week, according to the report of the division of vital statistics. The number of deaths for the week ending yesterday was 429, as compared with 408 for the previous seven days. The report also shows that the number of deaths for the week ending yesterday was 429, as compared with 408 for the previous seven days.

PLAN WATER TESTS FOR SOUTH PHILA.

Borings to Be Made in League Island Park to Determine Quality

PRESENT SUPPLY IS POOR

Within a few weeks the city water experts will know whether the water supply can be held out as a flow from artesian wells in South Philadelphia.

About six test wells are to be drilled in League Island Park. The Artesian Well Drilling Co. is doing the work, the contract price being $7000. According to Chief C. E. Davis of the Water Bureau, today, not much hope is held out that the experiment will be successful.

The commission appointed some months ago to report on the general water situation, he said, "does not believe, from its investigations, that anything will come of the experiment. We do not know just what sort of water is there, so the wells will be sunk at intervals through the park, and tests will be made at various levels. We will not sink the wells more than 200 feet."

According to the report of the commission, the investigations show that the flow from the wells in South Philadelphia is poor, and the water is so strongly impregnated with mineral matter as to render it unfit either for domestic or industrial uses. We will be positive about it, one way or the other, at the conclusion of these tests. We must determine the quantity of water at each level as the wells go down through the different strata, and then we must determine its quality."

The commission of experts, consisting of J. W. Ledoux, chairman; George W. Fuller, Joseph P. Hassard and J. W. Smith, reported that the supply from the Schuylkill is exhausted at periods of low-season flows and the water is polluted.

BOY SCOUTS MEET AT PAOLI

Troop No. 1 Will Be Host at Tenth Anniversary
