

MAYOR OF DUBLIN GREET'S CARDINAL

Calls at Moore's Office, but Executive Is Absent—Attends Reception

GOES TO ATLANTIC CITY

A strenuous program was carried out today by Laurence O'Neill, Lord Mayor of Dublin, who came to this city in the interest of Irish relief work.

After visiting the office of Mayor Moore, greeting Cardinal Dougherty and attending a reception in their honor at the Bellevue-Stratford, Lord Mayor O'Neill and Mr. Anderson went to Atlantic City, where they were met by Mayor Bader, who escorted them to the camp of Jack Dempsey, world's champion pugilist.

After seeing Dempsey give an exhibition of his prowess, the visitors will see the sights at Atlantic City and return here tonight in time to take a train for Boston.

Mayor Moore had left for his summer home at Island Heights before Lord Mayor O'Neill and Mr. Anderson arrived at City Hall and they were received by Durrill Shuster, the Mayor's secretary. He welcomed the visitors to the city and expressed regret at the absence of the Mayor.

"The position of Mayor is a very arduous one," said Lord Mayor O'Neill, "and he is obliged to be on the go constantly. I fully realize that and I am not surprised that Mayor Moore does not happen to be in."

The Dublin executive then visited Cardinal Dougherty and brought with him a message from Cardinal Logue, of Ireland, thanking Cardinal Dougherty for a gift of money which was sent to the Philadelphia archdiocese to aid the sufferers in Ireland.

Commenting on conditions in various cities which he has visited both in this country and abroad, Lord Mayor O'Neill said the sentiment of the people generally appeared to be undergoing a change. "I notice a decline in the number of mass meetings," he said.

"The people now appoint committees to take up their questions and think that better results and solutions for their difficulties may be obtained in that manner."

NOTED FRENCH PAINTER AND HOSTESS

U. S. WOMEN LACK HEART, FRENCH PAINTER ASSERTS

Are Not Constitutionally Sentimental, Declares the Marquise de Frayssoux Mazieres on Visit Here

The American woman makes a splendid record in a social standpoint. Her beauty of figure and her ability to wear lovely clothes are unsurpassed. She can give to her husband the benefit of a mentality developed far beyond her years. She can outplay him at any of his sportsmanlike games.

But given all these remarkable qualities, the American woman misses out in just one. She lacks in heart. She cannot give her husband the depth of feeling the French woman gives because constitutionally she is not sentimental.

The American man comes in for the same indictment. He will work hard to make money to lavish clothes on his wife, but his heart is in his business.

None other than the Marquise de Frayssoux Mazieres, noted French painter and guest of Mrs. Harry C. Thayer, of Haverford, expressed these views. The expression came in a most unobtrusive manner as the Marquise sat quite informally in the library of the Thayer home and talked briefly of her views of America.

The Marquise is particularly attractive. She is especially illustrative of an aristocratic type. Monsieur de Frayssoux, painter, writer and inventor, having served as aide-camp to the Minister of the Marine under Napoleon III. He was also a particular favorite of Empress Eugenie. Her mother was a daughter of the Countess of Hautpoul and connected with the family of Casteline Esparrac, which makes the Marquise a relative of the Count Boni de Castellane, the first husband of Anna Gould, Madame de Sevigne, who was the grand-niece of the Marquise.

The French visitor comes here with the reputation of having painted 200 portraits of famous persons throughout the country.

It was the subject of the beauty of American women that led the Marquise to the discussion of their lack of sentimentality.

"They have remarkable figures," she said, "the kind that make wonderful pictures. They are chic and the smart ones wear their clothes wonderfully. I can't get out of their sportfulness and at their interest in charities."

"How do they rank as wives?" was the question asked.

"The French who wore flesh-colored blouse and plaited red skirt, both vastly becoming to her, scowled a bit and then replied:

"Let me explain. They do not have the heart. In France the women think, think, think. They suffer because of their hearts."

"The American man is the same. He will work hard to make the woman think that his life in the most beautiful of clothes, but he is not concerned much with the sentimental side of marriage."

"The Frenchman—Ah, he is all heart. He is forever wanting to know what his wife is thinking about. He is interested in her. He admires her. If he does not like her frock he will say so."

Man Authority in Home

"In the French home the man is the authority. It is he who is master. The French woman is highly intellectual, too, like the American woman, but her husband represses this unless it be in society where women in France must shine if they would be anything. For in France if a woman is not spiritual she is nothing."

"America it is not like this. The man and the woman are equal in the home."

"The Marquise is very much in love with America because of its beautiful

ROTAUN AROUSED BY JURY'S ACTION

District Attorney Angry Over Failure to Convict Former Patrolman Severino

TO HAVE HIM TRIED AGAIN

Aroused over the failure to return a verdict in the case of Joseph Severino, a former patrolman of the Seventh and Carpenter streets station, who was charged with extortion, District Attorney Rotaun has arranged to bring Severino to trial again within the next two weeks.

The jury disagreed after wrangling eight hours. There were four women jurors, and according to the information received by Assistant District Attorney Gordon, they, with seven other members of the jury, stood for a verdict of guilty from the moment they began to deliberate.

Mr. Gordon was advised that upon retiring to their rooms one of the jurors immediately remarked: "Well, I guess we stand eleven to one for a guilty verdict. You have the wrong idea. I think a copper being so badly unrepentant is entitled to indulge in a little graft, and if he is lucky enough to get some he should be commended and not prosecuted and sent to jail for it."

These views were not shared by the other members, who tried in every manner to convince this juror that he had the wrong idea, but they were unable to swerve this obstinate juror, who held out until 10 o'clock that night, when the jury, because of the women, were instructed to return to court whether they had agreed or not.

Mr. Gordon has investigated these reports and finds that they are true. Severino is charged, while a policeman, with having taken $35 from Luigi Montani, who was under arrest accused of shooting a fellow countryman, by promising him immunity from imprisonment. Montani, instead of being freed, was given an indeterminate sentence of eight months to two years in the Eastern Penitentiary. He complained and Severino's arrest followed.

THEY TOOK THE CAKE

Eight of Them Robbed Bakery—Are Chased by Patrolman

Eight men who were dividing small boxes of cakes near Twenty-second and Vine streets at 5 o'clock this morning were surprised by a patrolman, but fled when he drew a revolver. All escaped. The cakes had been taken from a display window of the Kehler-Weyl Baking Co., 200 North Twenty-second street.

The men were seen near an alley by Patrolman Brady, of the Fifteenth and Vine streets station. They saw him at the same moment and as he drew a revolver and ordered them to surrender, they scattered and ran away.

Brady was unwilling to fire after the men as he had recognized them merely as suspicious characters. An examination later showed that the baking company's window had been broken.
