The Alameda project was urged with especial emphasis by Senator Lodge, majority floor leader, but he could not hold the Republicans in line in the face of the withering fire directed against the "real estate deal" by Senators Borah, King and La Follette. Nineteen Republicans voted with twenty-one Democrats against the authorization. Twenty-six Republicans and four Democrats supported the Naval Committee. In an effort to save the Alameda project at the previous session of Congress, when the naval bill failed of passage. Senator Lodge staged a secret legislative session of the Senate in order to discuss behind closed doors the necessity for enormous appropriations for the Pacific due to the status of American-Japanese relations. Mr. Lodge's address was satirized by the champions of economy as an effort to use the "bugaboo of the yellow peril" in order to "rescue a huge pork-barrel project." Yesterday's vote by the Senate was in the nature of a rejection of the Lodge plea. home, 1912 Venango street.

He says American merchants are neglecting a rich market in Northern Spain. Vigo harbor, he says, is one of the largest and finest ports on the Continent and is the nearest port of Europe to the United States. It is a port of call for British, French and Spanish steamship lines, and recently the Ward and American Lines have included it in their stops.

"There is a steady import market for motorcars, hardware and ship stores," said Mr. Nathan. "American cars are popular and America could get a larger proportion of the import trade if she cultivated more thoroughly the Northern Spanish markets."
