A Famous Pudding and All the Quintessence of the Old World Are to Be Found at the Cheshire Cheese

CLOSE your eyes and then in thought you fancy drift back 200 years ago to a street named after the Fleet river in a busy part of the town, London, England. The history of the tavern or inn in a measure the literary history of England, for with its complex varieties of social institutions, the English tavern or inn holds its own in the old England of the days of the old English.

Through the days of the old English tavern, abides with the daughter of the British Isles and the cosmopolitan wayfarer for a real glory in memoriam that clings close to the heart of the dear old London.

Fleet street, London, famous for many things besides its name, still holds a tavern to which the last few hundred years has brought much fame—this is the Cheshire Cheese.

Wine Office court, a small thoroughfare of Fleet street, is so called because the state issued wine licenses here in a building adjacent to the court. Here the famous Apollo Club was wont to meet and other clubs, too, that have passed into oblivion.

Under an archway through a lane, or perhaps, you would call it an alley, paved entrance to the Cheese. Upon opening the door one finds himself in a narrow hall at the far end of which is a quaint bar. It is small, to be sure, and framed by small window panes, which admit the light of day; it is presided over by a buxom barmaid. There are two rooms—one considerably larger than the other.

The Cheshire Cheese boasts of no fine fixtures or appointments, for "still holds a scrupulously clean and tidy floor covered with green baize. Along one side of the wall there are rough, straight seats not unlike the stalls or pews in the abbey; there are tables between these seats like seats in a complete replica of our modern Pullman dining car.

Upstairs are the kitchen, office and private dining rooms, for "still holds a fact the reality occasionally visits the Cheese for a lark and to dine on its justly famous pudding. The spirit of hospitality and good cheer greets you upon your entrance. Then, too, the acquainted with every one else, lends an air of friendliness to the place.

Steaks and chops and sausages are the specialty and seemingly a rumpsteak pudding is upon the bill of fare. This is accompanied by a big mealy potato, and framed by small window panes, which admit the light of day; it is presided over by a buxom barmaid. There are two rooms—one considerably larger than the other.

Hot sultry days are waning and the early twilight and a hint from the weatherman tells us that the year is full past its prime and then it is high time for the Cheese, to draw its blinds, light the gas and start the fire on the immense hearth. The savory winds are to come, such as an order of Irish stew, to soften the bleak November chill.

The pudding, as made at the Cheshire Cheese, is made to weigh about fifty to sixty pounds and it is then cooked for twenty hours.

We seat ourselves on the hard wooden benches in the Cheese and await our dinner on Saturday of rumpsteak pudding, which is said to be served about 1 o'clock. The waiter spreads a snowy white cloth over the table and then sets forth an array of cutlery, tankards, salt and pepper cellars and castors, not to mention the platters, which are real willowware, by the way, and then in a husky undertone he informs us that "hit won't be down until half past one to the minute." Then we sit quietly and listen to the quips and jests of those about us, for many of the legal lights and other people well known about the town come to the inn at this hour.

We are then made aware of the arrival of a huge pudding and can hardly sit still in our seats until this delectable morsel of goodness is served us.

PANELS LONGER ON NAVY CREPE FROCK

By CORINNE LOWE
It really depends entirely on our elbows. If you are a sister with the dimpled kind, you cling to the short sleeve and the long-glove bill. If, on the contrary, you are a sister with sharp, many faceted elbows, you seek sanctuary in the long sleeve—often the bell variety. Both kinds of sleeves are correct these days.

The above frock of navy Canton crepe presupposes the more amiable elbow. This model is made on the simple lines now so fashionable. Its trimming consists of cut work, showing a foundation of antique red, and this trimming supplies the two side panels considerably longer than the skirt.

These side panels, by the way, are still being much worn, even by the pioneer souls who love a new fashion.

Good Bye Flies

Flyosan

Flyosan is used in an ordinary inexpensive garden sprayer, which you can procure at hardware stores. Flyosan has a pleasant aromatic odor.

WHEN Flyosan is thoroughly sprayed into the air of a room, every fly dies as if by magic.

It is not magic. It is science.

After years of fly-fighting, with everything from poisons to "swatting," modern science has produced Flyosan, the sure, quick, safe means of wiping flies out—by the roomful.

Flyosan is not poisonous or even harmful to human beings, animals, birds, or fowl. It leaves no muss to clean up.

Flies—common house flies—are a constant menace to health. They often carry millions of disease germs. Flyosan sprayed into the air of a room kills them wholesale—every one—within five minutes.

If Flyosan should in any way fail to live up to your expectations, we will refund the retail price.

Sold by Druggists, House-furnishing departments, Seed and Hardware stores.

Write for the Flyosan booklet. It tells how to rid your home of every kind of insect pest.

People Tell Us These Are the Best Couch Hammocks in Town at $12.50

We know that they are good, for it is by design and not by accident. A reliable hammock maker worked with us for many months to get the hammocks to this high point of durability and good appearance.

Gray or khaki duck is used to cover them and it is good, weather-resisting quality and the thick pad is covered with it, too. No skimping on that!

Frames are of strong angle iron and the springs are galvanized against rust. One splendid feature is the chains reaching the springs in back as well as front, so that there is no weight on the fabric, as in so many hammocks.

Other Couch Hammocks, $11.50 to $35

have the same reliable basic features and there is interesting choosing among khaki, gray, cheery cretonnes and blue, green or tan stripes. Many have upholstered backs and headrests.

Hammock Stands, Special at $5.50

Couch-hammock stands of strong angle iron, finished in green, are made with braces across the bottom. These prevent scratching.
