MAXWELL Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger THOSE faithful and enthusiastic baseball fans who did the double shift at Hard luck has pursued the Phillic L Shibe Park yesterday, getting an eyeful of the morning and afternoon from the moment they arrived at the contests, now believe that the age of miracles has not passed and there still training camp in Gainesville, Fla., un is a Santa Claus. They were present when one of the greatest spectacles til today. This isn't an alibi for thei of the century was put on-a spectacle far greater in importance than the high water at Johnstown-and it will take them years to explain it. They were present when the Athletics won two ball games in a single Nobody knows when this happened before and nobody cares. Two victories on Memorial Day make it a memorable occasion. When playing true to form, the fans are satisfied with two victories in a week. This two a day stuff almost is too much. The second consecutive victory had a strange effect on the huge crowd which packed Shibe Park. There was a feeble cheer when a lightning double play retired Boston and then came deep, thick and dense silence. The udden realization that the Athletics actually and positively copped a pair of conflicts stunned the spectators and they silently stuggered out of park. No upise was made, fearing they would wake up and learn it was all a dream. Connie Mack was dazed after the second game. While being congratu-Jated be admitted mechanically his team had been victorious and hoped the good work would continue. Nobody could blame Connie for that.

But the strangest part of it all is that the A's really outplayed the Red Sox and deserved both glorious triumphs. They thumped their way to victory in the morning and repeated in the afternoon. In the morning a rock'em and sock'em number was put on for the faithful and a lot of baseballs were knocked out of shape.

In the afternoon, Ed Rommel, the boy heaver, was heaving in his very best vein and the visitors didn't have a chance.

AFTER studying the statistics and taking everything into con-sideration, we are inclined to believe that the Red Sox had as much chance of winning as a stranger on tiene McGuckin's private golf course.

Rommel Almost Hurls No-Hit Game

ROMMEL was in wonderful form in the P. M. battle. The youngster had the Sox eating out of his sun-burned hand and narrowly escaped pitching a po-hit game. For six innings not a man reached first base meaning only eighteen batsmen faced him. In the seventh Liebold hit a long fly to right and Witt couldn't reach it. The clout was good for three bases.

The next two men were easy outs and Derrill Pratt sent Nemo home with a clean single to center. This was the only clean hit of the afternoon registered by the opposition. During the game only twenty-nine batters stood in front of the saucer, which proved that Rommel had them thoroughly tamed.

Cy Perkins was the hero of the afternoon because he put his team in the lead in the fifth with a home run smack into the pocket of a fan in the left field bleachers. Up to that time, neither side had counted and with Rommel whissing 'em over, the one lone tally looked as big as a house. Cy's drive cleared the barrier and was not at all tainted.

After Boston had tied the score following Witt's muff, the A's got after Russell in the eighth and managed to score one run. This was done by loading the bases with none out. Brazil's sacrifice fly won the ball game.

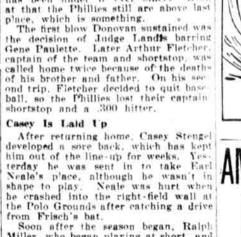

Perkins also started the fireworks in the morning game. The Red Sox had counted in the first frame and Perk punched one into the stands in the second, just to let the folks now his team was in the game. After that the boys socked the daylights out of Thormshlen, driving him off the rubber after two had hit safely in the fourth. That brought Karr into the picture and he allowed Joe Dugan to wallop a homer and score his two pals shead of him. Karr made an impressive entrance which was enjoyed by all.

Two more home runs were made before the contest came to a close Witt bounced one into the stands in the fifth stanza and Tilly Walker almost knocked the pill out of the park in the eighth.

FIVE homers were made in one day, which appears to be some sort of a record. This was not taken up, however, as the figger fiberts were too busy explaining the double rictory.

from those who ought to know

A drop as flat as a June bride's pancake, the usual crop of wise birds, who are always ready with a cure-all, cropped up to hand out batches of free advice to the moguls. Not that the moguls didn't need some advice, but they preferred to get it in their own sweet way.

The fans had it all figured out for themselves. What they wanted was more hitting. The gentle sound of the ash colliding with the ball is the national anthem of those who claim citizenship in the Dukedom of Swat. No music is as joyous to the fan as the duil staccate of the base knock.

In after years the fan remembers and the scribe finds much to rave about in the pitching classic. But for putting the old zip into the blood and making a lot of otherwise perfectly staid citizens act like a collective recess in a kindergarten. it takes the base hit, the long, ringing drive.

Then came the cork-center ball to replace the old rubber center affair, and immediately things began to perk up.

Now a look down the averages reveals sluggers where sluggers never grow and blossomed before. Today there are more three-hundred sticksmiths in the major and also in the minor leagues than there ever have been before since the game reached its modern stage.

And interest is coming back or, rather, is back aiready. For the last compleof seasons every park in the country has drawn in more at the turnstiles than ever before

THE answer is the hitting. Should it so happen by any wide stretch I of the imagination that those who control the destinies of baseball would further handicap the batter with the result that there would be a general falling off of batting averages, the effect would be immediately visible at the turnstiles.

Cobb Burning the Trail

A ND speaking of hitting, a peep down the averages indicates that Old Pop. Time has been kidded again. The old boy is beginning to stagger and has his tongue hanging out. For about a decade and a half he has been trying to overhaul one Tyrus Raymond Cobb.

At first he merely laughed and knowingly winked, biding his time. But now he is probably beginning to wonder whether the great Tiger is made of mortal clay after all. A couple of seasons ago it looked so Ty's greatest handleap was his poor start. Year after year he drifted along, refusing to go to a training camp, and when the season started it took him a month or so to get the well-known engle eye on the spheroid.

This year Cobb went to the training camp. He toiled even as all the other galley slaves, even harder.

The result is obvious evident, we should say

He got off to a running start, began to mave the ball like the Cobb of old and possibly harder. The averages this morning gave him a hitting percentage If he holds true to the form of past performances, he ought to bit .500, for his swatting has always improved as the season progressed, but that is hardly likely this season

A few years ago part of Cobb's batting average was due to his phenomenal speed in reaching first. A lot of infield slaps were converted into safeties because it took the most perfect kind of work by opposing infielders to cut bu down. Now some of that old speed is gone, so Cobb's batting average of 422 means exactly .422.

AND with Tris Speaker paking the pill for . 108 and George Sides on his neck with . 401, it looks like there will be some real tun in the American League for the old diadrin of Swat this zeason.

Baseballs Not Livelier—Just Made Better

EVERY time a lot of home runs are made, a discussion starts about the kind of baseballs now being used in the big leagues. It is claimed that the ball is livelier and this makes the long hits possible. There also is some talk about using a faster ball in the American than in the National Lengue. This is all bunk, because the same factory turns out balls for both leagues and they use the same brand.

Tom Shibe, vice president of Reach's factory, says there is no difference in the baseballs, only that a better grade of yarn is being used.

"During the war it was bard to get wood," said Mr. Shibe, "and the haseballs were of an inferior quality. The leather coverings also were had and that, too, worked against the ball. Now we get the best of everything and the ball is as near perfect as can be."

The cover this year is different and treated with a special preparation discovered by Mr. Shibe. It is harder to serutch the surface, and no longer do they become "wingy" or all roughed up. If you happen to take notice you will see that fewer balls are thrown out of the games this season.

Therefore it might be said that the yarn and the better workmanship make the baseballs better and a teiffe liveller.

The real reason, however, is that the big leaguers no longer care for one-base hits. Ruth's success as a home-run clouter has started a clouters' union, and every batter takes a healthy swing. They want to hit the ball out of the lot, throw science to the winds and hit with the deuces wild. Once upon a time Ty Cobb was lucky if he made one home run in a year. now he has about a half dezen to his credit. Speaker also is trying for fences instead of placing his hits where the other fellows ain't • • rago to five hits and no runs, and Toney, of New York, allowed Philadel-phia, only seven hits and one run. In the American Lengue Collins, of New York, yielded four hits and one run to Washington, but in the afternoon con-test Mogridge, of the Senators, got revenge by blanking his former team-mates with two hits. The Boston Americans were able to score only once in each game with Philadelphia, Rom-mel holding the Red Sox to two hits and Perry allowing eight. Perry allowing eight.
