How to Plant and Raise Beans, Lettuce and Beets in Order to Get Results—Truck Patches Save Money

By Mrs. M. A. Wilson

Every second woman is asking for white sports low shoes! They tell us they are not easy to find at moderate prices. Kinds with saddle straps, wing tips, low heels and contrasting trimmings.

But here are actually eight different styles of such sports shoes at $6.40 to $9.75.

Made to Wanamaker orders and really RIGHT. Real white buckskin oxfords with perforated tips or with the popular saddle strap and medium heels at $9.75. White leather ankle-strap pumps with saddle straps, toe pieces, back pieces or binding smartly done in black or brown leather at $9.75.

White leather pumps with saddle straps and perforations at $7.75.

White canvas oxfords with saddle strap or tip at $6.40. White canvas pumps with ankle strap and medium or low covered heels, $6.90.

CREPE DE CHINE HAS UNUSUAL PLAITING

Adventures With a Purse

PHONOGRAPH records are things we are constantly buying. A new piece comes into the house, meets with the favor of every one and is played until the irate he-parent threatens to break the record, to say nothing of the machine. New records are greatly desired, but often an extravagance and it's well to be on the lookout for sales. One of the music shops is selling out and offers records at a reduction of 20 per cent. In this way we can have several new tunes with which to keep his honor, the "master" of the house, pacified.

White is the ideal thing to wear in the summer and all of us manage to have some white skirts and dresses for those warm days. But dead white is a very difficult thing to wear and yet too much color will take away from the cool and fresh appearance. Just a touch of color is all that is needed and the wise girl does it with a string of beads. I saw a counter with a wealth of colored glass beads for $1. Brilliant reds, soft blues, a clear turquoise and every color of bead one could want is to be found among this display.

Babies wiggle around in their high-chairs and the bibe, unless tied on, twist and turn until they usually are any place but where they do the most good. There is a bib clasp of sterling silver that would take the place of strings that are liable to tighten with the turning of that little head. A chain connects two small clasps that catch the corner of the bib, and they hold it in place without any trouble. They are priced at $1.

Reduce matronly dressing with cool parts of cream and vinegar to the desired consistency.

Things You'll Love to Make

1814 Sleeve.

On your new frock make this interesting 1814 SLEEVE. The upper part of this sleeve is cut in two parts each having a scalloped edge. Each scallop is three inches across the top. A thin underlay is necessary. Join the sleeve to the lining at the top and the bottom. Fasten each side of the sleeve to the lining by stitching along the hollows between the scallops, and leaving the scallops loose. Crochet an edging around the scallops. The color and kind of thread used for the crocheted edge will depend upon the material of which the 1814 SLEEVE is made. FLORA.

MRS. WILSON'S ANSWERS

My Dear Mrs. Wilson—Being a daily reader of the paper I thought I would write and ask you to kindly publish my recipe for that white dressing that is cream for cream cabbage and sour potatoes, etc.

One would have thought that last season would have completely used up all the plants for the community. Not so. Although plants are not nearly so plentiful as they were one year ago, they continue to appear on a point reaching above the belt. The same effect is obtained at the sieves.

Paradise—plus Melitta. Without her he refused to let himself think. Instead, he went to her, rather white-faced and shaken but feeling himself so full of compelling he did not doubt the event.

She met him on the piazza, her eyes stary, her lips falling instantly into a soft, merry smile. "I was wishing you'd come—right away," she said. "Did that bring you, or is it just a happen so?"

"Providence brought me, I think—if you wish for me." Benning began in a throaty voice he hardly recognized as his own. Melitta started a little and drew a pace away, saying with her head high: "Maybe so. But you would have known before morning anyway. Poppy is looking for you to ask if you'll help us—we have to be married early tomorrow—and there is so much needs doing!"

"Tomorrow?" Benning echoed, laughing hollowly. "When I thought you were done with him."

"You have a trick of making mistakes," she answered gravely. "As for instance, thinking you could supplant your most useful friend. As soon as we realized it, Poppy said, 'Let him go as far as he likes—'

Benning waited for no further words as he rushed away. Poppy met him, held out his hand and smiled rather grimly, saying: "From your look, if I want to talk, let's talk now is the time."

Six weeks later Mr. and Mrs. Poppy Sanders got wedding cards from Benning and his bride—the sometime Persia Moon. They laughed softly over them. "Poppy had heard something of Persia in reservation—and said one to another: 'He got caught in the rebound.'"

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

In the Rebound

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Action and reaction being always equal, after Benning to disprove the axiom? Be sure it was no question of his asking—he did not, indeed, realize its existence. Benning, however, thought, hence took no account of the winds of chance.

Yet they had blown him through carefully measured years to a scholastic success that he felt assured success still greater. Thus he had had no time for playing, still less for the pretty game of love—the little, concrete in expensive things like flowers, candy, auto and theatre parties, not to mention giddy raiment of the latest mode. Girls meant all that, but Benning had had a good deal of the latest mode. He had had a good deal of the latest mode. He had had a good deal of the latest mode.

It did not tell her so outright he understood as a man of privilege of such ingraving natures. So when he plunged into the world of affairs, got a football, only to be swept from it by the wave flood, he felt that only an "if" stood between them. Luck lay in wait for him. Home from the far, with never a scratch, she opened a way for him, not gilt-edged but gilt-paved. It had to be some years ahead. Meantime he had to get accustomed to the atmosphere of wealth—learn to dress with a certain elegance. It had to be some quiet elegance it had to be some quiet elegance it had to be some quiet elegance.

Melitta was, after a sort, compounded of saint and siren. Vividly beautiful, alive to her finger tips, dancing like a bead and singing like a thrush in her first in the hearts of his countrymen. Benning had no intention of disparting the right—when it came to Poppy. She had already more than he deserved. Besides, he could not possibly need Melitta as Benning himself did. Hence, self sedulously, he began to supplement his friend, to the supplying of her needs, but soon by open and eager patronage. Fate appeared to have taken the case for him. Somehow there was a growing distance between Melitta and
