Stanislaus Zbyszko, forty-two-yearold grappling veteran, a mat campaigner for more than a score of years, conqueror of Strangler Lewis and present world's catch-as-catch-can wrestling titleholder, gave an exhibition of his championship form at the Mct-ropolitan Opera House last night. The Polander pinned the shoulders of Ivan Linow, a much taller adversary, to the carpet with a crotch hold from a double twelve consecutive games, but dropped out June 1. During his hitting period Williams came through with sixteen safeties in forty-four times up for a mark of .364.

The fighters, stripped to the waist, had no protection from the hottest kind of a blistering summer sun. For two hours and eighteen minutes they banged away at each other, while the sweltering eye-witnesses mopped their brows and wondered when one of the battlers would crumple up from exhaustion and sunstroke.

But champion and challenger struggled on and on, blood and perspiration flowing in unprecedented quantities. At one time Sullivan's stomach showed signs of weakening and Kilmin proposed a draw. Sullivan replied to this surgestion with a blow that knocked the challenger down. Finally, Kilrain could stand the punishment and the torrid heat no longer.
