

THOS. L. REYNOLDS BEATEN AND SHOT

New York Man With Varied Career, Alleged Gambler, Attacked in Florida

IS IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Daytona, Fla., June 11.—Lorillard Reynolds, a gambler and Broadway figure, better known in New York by his former name, Thomas L. Reynolds, was beaten and shot Thursday night by masked men who attacked him in front of the ruins of the Seabreeze Opera House, across the river from Daytona.

Reynolds' opera house was destroyed last week by fire. Thursday night he was viewing the scene with a real estate man, Russell Dymann. Two automobiles drove up and poured forth men whose faces were concealed by cloth masks. Waving revolvers they ordered Reynolds to throw up his hands and Dymann to run to Reynolds' car, which was standing in front of the gambler's home, a block and a half away.

Mystery in Fire

The men then threw Reynolds into one of their cars, carried him five miles down the beach and left him on the road near Ormond. A man found him unconscious and took him home, whence he was transferred to the hospital.

Some of the men who attacked Reynolds have been identified. The authorities believe they were persons who resented last week's fire, the origin of which was mysterious, or that a woman was involved.

Thomas L. Reynolds has been well known in New York for thirty years. He is fifty-four years old. His activities have included those of politician, real estate operator, oil stock promoter and operator of a gambling house. He is often referred to as "The Senator," because at times he found it advantageous to use that title.

In 1918 Judge McIntyre in General Sessions fined him $250 and sentenced him to ninety days in the Tombs as a common gambler. Thereafter he went to Europe, having done well with the sale of oil stocks, and upon his return bought a gentleman's estate in Seabreeze, Fla. He also bought the new opera house there and announced his intention of making it the finest picture theatre in the South. His permission of the Circuit Court of Volusia County he changed his name last year to Lorillard Reynolds.

Years ago Reynolds was a captain in the Sixty-ninth Regiment. He was frequently was spoken of as a friend and associate in real estate deals of the late Big Tim Sullivan, but a man who was a friend of Sullivan, said recently this was pretense, as was Reynolds' claim to great influence in the councils of Tammany.

In January, 1912, when he was president of the Thomas L. Reynolds Co., real estate, he married Miss Anna House, of Little Rock, Ark., but two months later she sued for separation. In the same year Jacques Stransky, restaurant proprietor, sued Reynolds for $250,000, accusing him of alienating the affections of Mrs. Stransky. This action was never brought to trial. In 1918 Reynolds married one of Hector's cabaret singers, but she started suit a year later for an annulment. She said her husband had deceived her into thinking he was a business associate of the Goulds and Rockefellers, a power in Tammany Hall, a landed proprietor in England, a former Ambassador of the United States to Russia, a delegate to the National Democratic Convention, and an important gentleman generally. In reality, she said, he was a common gambler.

First Conviction There Under Prohibition Enforcement Law

New York, June 11.—The first conviction for violation of the new State prohibition enforcement law in New York County was returned yesterday by a jury in the extraordinary liquor court, which, officials say, is costing the taxpayers $830 a day. The case was the fourth presented and followed two acquittals and a disagreement by the jury in former sessions of the court.

Michael Rovinsky, the defendant, pleaded guilty in the Magistrate's Court on April 8 and later demanded a jury trial. He sold liquor in a rear room of his saloon.

Yesterday's verdict was reached after the jury had announced it was unable to agree and had been sent back for further deliberation. Justice Best suspended sentence until Tuesday next. The penalty is $300 fine.

Brassieres of Lovely Materials That Give a Boyish Line

Pink jean, checked cotton, basket weave mesh, mercerized and silk brocades, fiber satin-striped poplin, fine tub satin and elaborate allover lace. Delicately creamy Valenciennes, imitation filet or hand-crochet edgings. Shoulder straps of tape, ribbon or of the material with embroidered scallops. All fasten neatly in the back. Because they look more like camisoles than brassieres they can be worn directly under a thin blouse or frock—another way to reduce two garments to one. Slender as well as large women tell us that these boyish line brassieres fit perfectly. They have no bones, no stays, no steels. They are cut in one piece with elastic at waistband to hold them properly. Their backs are cut from four to five inches longer than most styles, so that they do not slip. They are "different." This week every woman is invited to see these brassieres for herself—and to take advantage of the special values if she likes. Sizes 32 to 46. (Central)
