

ARCTIC BLIZZARDS BALK AMUNDSEN

Explorer's Plans Go Awry When Ship Encounters Terrible Storms

ICE FLOES WORST IN YEARS

By the Associated Press
Nome, Alaska, June 21.—Masses of early Arctic ice last August locked in a rigid grip the vessel Maude, on which Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, hoped to drift past the South Pole, and a terrible storm swept the schooner ashore ninety miles from Cape Serge and smashed her propeller, he said here today.

Captain Amundsen appeared in Nome last Friday with the tidings that his ship was disabled and he would have her towed to Seattle for repairs, later returning to the exploration.

"When I left Nome early last August," the explorer related, "I proceeded in the vicinity of Cape Serge, where I was to pick up a native family to add to the crew, but the ice conditions were the worst in years, and we were forced to lay to for two weeks, during which time it was impossible to reach shore."

Ninety Miles in Three Weeks
Captain Amundsen explained that three weeks were required to cover the ninety miles between East Cape and Cape Serge. The Maude had lost one propeller going through the Northeast Passage in 1919 and 1920—she is a twin screw type—and was pushing ahead with her remaining propeller.

"While working the vessel into Cape Serge a blinding blizzard swept the sea. We had all our anchors out, but the ice floes pushed everything ashore, where we found the other propeller out of commission, but no other damage apparent. There was no chance of escape. The schooner was frozen in for the winter."

Between January 31 and April 10, Dr. Sverdrup and Oscar Wisting, two of the Maude's company, ventured out into the Arctic winter and made an extensive magnetic survey of the interior country.

Natives Offer Aid
On May 27, Amundsen left the Maude and went to East Cape to await the arrival of a chance ship which might take him to Nome. At East Cape he was the guest of Charles Carpendale, a fur trader.

Captain Amundsen said natives on the Dromede Islands, informed of his plight, told a Captain Pedersen, of the schooner Herman, who lost no time in going to his rescue. Captain Amundsen told him natives at Prince of Wales Island were starving and Captain Pedersen stopped to give them food from the ship's stores. The trip to Nome was uneventful thereafter.

New Additions to This Remarkable Group Make This the Greatest Anniversary Sale Value Yet Offered

1000 Suits for Men

Less Than Wholesale Value!
The Lowest Price for Same Quality
Since the Days Before the War

The cost of producing clothing went up and during the war, reaching a point early in 1920 that was three times the cost of 1915. Now the ruling prices have come down about one-third. But THIS REMARKABLE LOT of Men's and Young Men's Suits is down to ABOUT ONE-HALF of the 1920 value. Our own as well as the manufacturers' profit is cut almost "down to the bone." The makers of "ALCO" Clothing are the chief contributors to this splendid collection, but the lot includes Hart, Schaffner & Marx and "Wickham" Suits also. ALL-WOOL, of course—and really fine—WORSTEDS, CASSIMERES, SERGES, plain colors, stripes, herringbones, checks, mixtures. Single- and double-breasted. A practically complete range of sizes—regular, stout, short, tall, slender—$26.50.
