

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

By Lee Pape. My little finger was sore today on account of my almost getting it caught in the door...

Well, how selfish of me not to have thought of that. O well, I suppose I can do without it, see. Me thinking of my little finger, but when it comes to a question between giving the Heels a cream and having you a cripple for life, I guess the Heels can do without the ice cream.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE. The Man Who Would Be. By MARY MORISON. John Carey's sister swung her pretty self down from the littered top of his big mahogany desk and regarded him with stern disapproval.

Her young voice was growing louder and louder with her indignation. "What you need is to live—even if you do get into a scrape like some of your clients and have to engage another lawyer to pull you out of it, I don't care."

John Carey laughed at the storm his sister's anger had raised. He looked up at the storm his sister's anger had raised. He looked up at the storm his sister's anger had raised.

He glanced slyly in front of him, seeing nothing but thinking hard. After all, was the girl right? He didn't seem to be getting much joy out of life, and why not? He thought it'd like to be a lawyer, but he had no money.

Miss Bronson looked up in surprise when he walked over to her desk and stood looking down at her silently. She regarded him inquiringly, waiting for him to speak.

John Carey at last, "You've worked here now for two years and must have formed an opinion of some kind during that time. What sort of man do you think I am?"

So it happened that at 4 o'clock the following day John Carey put down his undisciplined hand and called through the door to Hilda: "Four o'clock, Miss Bronson. The wild hour is upon us."

It was the first time John had ever been in Hilda's apartment. As he sat in a big chair in front of the fire he looked around wondering how dainty everything was—and yet how livable. It was the sort of room a man dreamed about if he were away from home.

Hilda looked at him with raised brows. "We could," she said, "I'd rather thought of asking you before, but I was sure you preferred all this."

But if you come home to my apartment we can sit before the open fire and discuss our wild pasts. How about it? "You're a wonderful woman, Hilda Bronson," said John, with fervor in his tones.

Peerless. Exactly the Right Car, that will give you the most for your money, cannot be found by chance—its selection requires a careful analysis of values.

Peerless. The car you want will probably be an eight—for among the better class cars more eights are produced and sold than all other types combined.

Peerless. Therefore, compare eights for power, pick-up, workmanship, comfort, appearance—and then for price.

Peerless. You will wonder why, for actual superiority in essentials, Peerless prices are lowest. The answer is—Peerless prices are based upon former low costs of buildings and machinery, and upon present costs of labor and materials.
