Phillies Begin Long Home Stand After Disastrous Trip Around the Entire Circuit

CARPENTIER FLATTENS TWO SPARRING PARDS WITH RIGHT WALLOP

Challenger Shows Audience Some Hitting Powers Which Have Been Concealed—Flock of New Partners Roughly Treated in Last Public Workout

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL
Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

Manhasset, L. I., June 24.

GEORGES CARPENTIER looked like a real fighter in his last public workout here yesterday. For almost an hour he performed for a large crowd of visitors and did better work than at any time since landing on this side of the ocean. This startling information was buzzed around by the camp followers and followeresses, and they should know. They have been getting an eyeful on visiting days for the last six weeks.

The challenger knocked a pair of sparring partners stiff and manhandled two others. That gave him a batting average of .500 for the day. While doing this he uncorked some fancy footwork and showed a wonderful right wallop. It was a real haymaker and always scored a bullseye.

"Any guy who can put over a punch like that," said Willie Lewis, "can carry my dough on July 2. He can punch hard, and when he hits something has to drop. He will do the same to Dempsey. Jack can't keep out of the way."

This is just one opinion gathered from the mob. There were many others in the same vein. Everybody was impressed because the hard hitting was entirely unexpected. Gasps of surprise came from the large audience, which contained about 10 per cent experts.

Georges operated on a flock of new sparring partners and sent them back home last night bearing the label, "Opened by mistake." These young gents were pressed into service because of the sad accidents which befell Paul Journee and Italian Joe Gans in Brooklyn last Monday night. Both were socked for loops and are not in shape for further damage. Italian Joe took it on the hoof on Wednesday and has not been heard from since. His work is over and he will have to pay to see the fight.

It was reported that some high-class boxers would box with the challenger, and many believed Charley Weinert had signed for a week. This, however, proved to be only a report, and the same went for the high-class stuff. There were three new ones—we counted them coming and going. They had kind faces—once—and a slight knowledge of boxing. They knew how to put up their hands and where to tie on the gloves.

• • •

THE first to appear was an agile athlete named Danny Ross. He weighed 147 pounds, and if they didn't pay him before he stepped into the ring he still is an amateur. Danny boxed one round and remained in an upright position throughout. This was another surprise.

Two Sparring Partners Are Knocked Out

NEXT to appear was his brother, who still bore the family name of Dave Rosenberg. Dave, according to the wise persons near me, was a fair third-rate light-middleweight. After seeing him we agree the man was right. He IS what was said about him.

Dave started out beautifully, and ten seconds after that stopped a hard right with his chin and flopped. There was much consternation as Georges assisted his partner to his feet, handled him gently and spoke kind words in his ear. Then he socked him around until Frawn-swah Des Camps called time. Dave staggered out of the ring bleary-eyed, but with a happy smile on his face.

Chris Arnold was the next victim. Nobody knew who Chris was, but in a short time decided he was a friend of Dave's. Chris had an anchor tattooed on his left arm, which proved he had been in the army or something. He led with his chin and hit Carpentier in the right fist. Arnold lost all interest in the proceedings as he lay out there in the hot sun, but he, too, was gently lifted to his feet and placed in position to earn his money.

After he left the ring Chris wiped his bloody nose, caressed a swollen lip, felt to find out if his left eye still was in place and said he slipped.

Joe Jeanette put on the finale. Joe is too old a bird to take any chances and romped through the three-minute session without getting hurt. He and Georges wrestled around the ring, did some in-fighting and covering up. Jeanette was too foxy to leave any openings, for he had reached an age where it is difficult to get up immediately after a sound sleep. However, Carpentier had a great workout with Joe and showed some stuff which only the colored marvel could have taught him.

While the workout was impressive, it meant nothing. Benny Leonard could have knocked out those bimboes, because all that was necessary was to let the right fist collide with an unguarded chin. The challenger had nothing to worry him. The sparring partners offered no resistance and he just waited for an opening. True, he showed an intelligent knockout wallop and snapped it across as well as any boxer, but he could have done the same to the big bag of sand out in the barn.

• • •

KNOCKING out that pair of mediocre minus fighters was the same as a guy who hits the stock market when it's down.

Challenger in Superb Physical Condition

CARPENTIER looked to be in superb physical condition. He is thinner than when I saw him two weeks ago and is down to weight. His eye is clear and his skin is colored with a healthy tan. He looked ready to step into the ring at a moment's notice.

The challenger made his usual impressive entrance when the proper time arrived. Wearing the white bathrobe which reached almost to the ground he walked through the crowd to the barn, closely followed by Des Camps and Gus Wilson. He did not smile, but wore a sort of a frown. After punching the bag a few moments and indulging in some limbering-up exercises, he wound soft bandages around his hands and donned the boxing gloves.

During the one-round sessions with the four sparring partners Carpentier appeared to be constantly looking for an opening to shoot across his right. It wasn't a hook, but a straight punch, delivered while the left shoulder was raised slightly. He put a lot of power behind the punch and something had to drop when it landed.

It is evident that Georges has been practicing this punch for some time. He probably figures that Dempsey will depend on his left for effective work, and plans to beat him to the punch. Time and again he let that right fly, and he missed only when he wanted to.

The last time I saw Carpentier his right was a joke. It was a Western Union wallop—telegraphed from the start, and anybody could avoid it. Now the punch is almost perfection.

His left also is good. Jeanette or somebody has been teaching him new stuff, for he now is jabbing stiff-armed like Jack Britton, and getting away with it. Still, it is hard to judge what a boxer can do against a real man when one sees him wallop the bimboes that can be had for a nickel a dozen.

• • •

BUT taking it all in all, Carpentier is very much improved and has every appearance of a classy boxer. He is in condition to fight and seems confident of victory.

No More Public Workouts Before the Fight

AFTER the boxing act Georges went to the barn to do some rope-skipping and bag-punching. He didn't do much of either and then led the procession to the house.

Before he left, Des Camps said that all workouts next week would be private. "Georges is in shape," he said, "and will not do any more hard work. He wants to be quiet until the big fight. The place will be closed to all visitors after today."

There was a great crowd on hand yesterday. Machines were parked on each side of the road and the guardian at the gate was kept busy. Folks from Great Neck, Little Neck, Bayside and other points north and south were there in abundance, and the scenery made the matinee look like a lawn fete.

Those who passed the outer portals were allowed to roam in the big yard or visit the barn. The house was fenced off and only those carrying canes were allowed to go in. Big Bill Edwards and a couple of friends got by safely and met the new sparring partners. Carpentier was asleep at the time and Journee was nursing a busted nose.

Many foreign writers were on the scene, wondering what it was all about. Such interest in a boxing match was entirely new to them.

• • •

THEY were allowed to stick around the house and not mix with the common mob because they were friends of Georges.

PHILS ARRIVE FOR LONG HOME STAY

Open This Afternoon With New York Giants in First of Six-Game Series

MACKMEN OFF FOR BOSTON

We have with us today the Phillies, bossed by Bill Donovan and owned by President Bill Baker among others. The party of the second part will be the Muggsy McGraw-Hughey Jennings managed New York Giants. Captain Irish Meusel and his mates checked in this morning for a long stay that lasts until July 23.

Contrary to expectations and reports, Ed Konetchy, the veteran first sacker of the Brooklyn Dodgers, will not be found in a Phillie uniform this afternoon. Everybody seemed to be in favor of the deal, according to reports from Brooklyn, but Prez Baker. The result is that Red Causey will continue to wear local regalia and Koney will do likewise in the City of Churches.

The Phils had anything but a successful western and eastern trip. They were nicked unmercifully by the men from across the Appalachians and likewise by the hired hands of the East. Yet they are returning home with hopes. The long grind away from home loam with the injured list increased, and with the loss of morning practice that results from traveling has made the Phils a doormat for the rest of the clubs. Back on the old camping grounds Donovan and his crew expect to get started. The pitching staff, shot to pieces by injuries, will be in better shape to start the home stay than they were when they went West. Lee Meadows is ready to take his turn on the hill with the same regularity as last year, and that means a lot, for Lee is one of the best twirlers in the senior circuit.

Bargains for Fans

Five games will be played with the Giants in three days. Tomorrow afternoon a double-header, a Saturday treat for the fans, is on the card, while the same thing holds for Monday. On Wednesday the Giants leave and Brooklyn comes to Broad and Huntingdon, followed by Boston, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Chicago.

The Athletics, displaying a brand of baseball that made the fans feel sorry that they were packing up to go away, captured the rubber game of the series with Washington by dropping the Senators 5 to 3 in the broiling sun. It was the fourth win out of the last six starts for the Mackmen, the best record they have made in many moons. The home stay on the whole has been more successful than any home stand in years, according to the sharps. In all the A's captured ten games and lost sixteen. Against Boston they split even in a six-game series, which gives them the edge in the series with two of the Eastern teams. Against the Westerners, the Mackmen did not do so well, winning one out of four from Detroit and one out of three from Cleveland, St. Louis and Chicago.

A's to Make Circuit

The Athletics start a series with Boston this afternoon that ultimately will carry them all around the circuit. Washington is met after the Red Sox, then the Yankees, followed by Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis and Chicago. The players were all in a happy mood last night as they boarded the rattlers for Beantown. Even Connie had a smile playing on his features as he thought of the game twirled by Bryan Harris.

The Texan went the full route and though touched rather lively, eleven hits in all being made off his delivery, he twirled a masterful brand of baseball. When the Senators threatened during the first six innings, fast fielding and full steam ahead on the part of Harris extricated the A's from the danger that seemed imminent. He passed but one man, a real record for an Athletic twirler, and bit one. Three lightning double plays contributed in a large measure to the absence of Senator spikes from the home plate during those six frames.

LEDGER WINS AGAIN

Hands Lorraine First Defeat In Twenty Games Played

The Ledger A. C. won its sixth straight game of baseball by stopping the Lorraine B. C. last evening at Twenty-seventh and Master streets. It was the first defeat sustained by Lorraine in twenty starts.

One of the features of the game was the hitting of Haines, who cleared the sacks with a triple in the fifth. The battery work of Kalman and Merrick was also commendable. The line-up:

Bingles and Bungles

The pesky Cards smacked the pennant-aspiring Pirates on both cheeks out in St. Louie. Twelve innings in the first game saw Gibson's men take a 3-to-2 count, while the second game figures read 3 to 3.

Boston is all aflame with the wonderful doings of the Braves. Fred Mitchell, who supported George Stallings in his made dash for the world's championship in 1914, is aided and abetted by Dick Rudolph, who hurled the majority of the victories in that eventful season.

The Braves were stumped yesterday by the Giants, three hurlers being pelted with unwonted cruelty for a 10-to-4 score. Scott, Watson and Braxton were the victims. Frisch, the Fordham graduate, was the batting star, with a four-ply swat and two singles.

Home runs are so plentiful since the inception of the lively ball that Babe Ruth receives only passing notice when he lines out a four-baser. 'Tis twenty-fifth came against the Red Sox off Thormahlen.

The Browns cast Ty Cobb's Tigers deeper into the second division by capturing a hectic twelve-inning fight after tieing the count in the ninth. Vangilder worsted the veteran Dauss. Veach socked out five singles out of as many trips to the plate in the even dozen rounds.

INDIANA AT AUDUBON

Professionals Will Play Crack New Jersey Nine Tomorrow

The Indiana Professionals will travel to Audubon N. J., tomorrow, to cross bats with the fast Audubon team. This will be the first of a series of games that the Indiana club will play with New Jersey teams.

On Sunday, Louis Weissman, the manager of the Pros, will take them to Boyertown, Pa., to meet the semi-pro club of that city.

IMPORTANT GAMES ON TWILIGHT LIST

Nativity, Fleisher, Germantown, Stetson, Dobson and Hohlfeld All in Action

S. P. H. A. IN FIRST GAME

Twilight baseball fans have the privilege of seeing a wide assortment of teams playing after-supper ball this evening, and some of our foremost and most prominent local semi-pros are in action. This is nothing new for the majority of them are busy playing every day.

Manager Phil Haggerty is all set for the Tamaqua team, which will appear before the critical Richmond public at Belgrade and Ontario streets and oppose Nativity. The uptowners on a recent trip up-State lowered the colors of Tamaqua, and they have not recovered from the shock to this day. They want revenge and have chosen this evening as the occasion. Carrigan will likely pitch for the locals.

Up at Chelten avenue and Magnolia streets, the home of Germantown, Dave Bennis will send his suburbanites against the Stetson hatters. Cotter, who is a Germantown boy, will pitch for Walter Johann's aggregation, while Bennis will pin his hopes on the veteran Johnny Barker to register a victory for the home contingent.

First Game for Sphas

The South Philadelphia Hebrew Association has been turning out crack athletic teams for many years. They have held a prominent position in basketball, football, soccer, track and field and baseball. Now they are a full-fledged home club, beginning this evening, when they line up against Chappie Johnson's Norfolk Stars at Broad and Bigler streets.

"We plan to give the fans downtown only the best," is the way Eddie Gottlieb, their hustling representative, expressed it. "We have a great club, but it will still be better and Charlie Glosk will pitch tonight. Parkesburg Iron will be met on Sunday, and the best in the State will all appear at Broad and Bigler streets."

While on the subject of Broad street it might be added that in the extreme other end of the city at Allegheny avenue Hohlfeld, undispted leaders of the Industrial League, play the Cuban Stars. It is the hardest game the hammockers have scheduled this season, but they expect to come out on top.

Bloomer Girls at Shanahan Grounds

The Quaker City Bloomer Girls, who recently defeated Hohlfeld at Broad street and Allegheny avenue in the presence of 15,000 fans, play the West Philly Giants on the Shanahan grounds, at Forty-eighth and Brown streets. Miss Anne Kniester, the "Babe Ruth" of the feminines, will be in the game, besides Miss Mary Gilroy, the sensational first sacker.

Ed Lusk has a little argument to settle way over in East Falls with Bob Calhoun and his Dobson contingent. These managers are rivals in all sorts of sport, soccer, basketball and baseball, and their coming together is a regular occurrence. Lusk has Eddie Gerner all primed to shoot at the weavers, while "Lefty" Schofield will hurl for Dobson.

GEORGES IS REGARDED AS A BOXING PHENOM

French Admit Heavyweight Challenger Is Not Normal Fistic Product as in Case of Dempsey—A Genius Suddenly Come to Life

By GRANTLAND RICE

WE STUMBLED upon one rather quaint French viewpoint in France recently in connection with approaching hostilities at Jersey City, of which you have doubtless heard rumors. This viewpoint was expanded for us by one of the best known of French sportsmen, who has taken a keen interest in the general development that is now fairly buzzing along the open road of play.

"THE great majority," he said, "take it for granted that Dempsey will beat Carpentier because the former is an American and the lattter is a Frenchman. In one way this is a logical viewpoint, since America has turned out all the heavyweight champions for the last thirty years and France has never turned out one. They know that on the average a good American boxer can beat a good French boxer, since the Americans are much better than the French at this game. In the same manner you could name ten leading tennis players among women who would be much better than any ten we could name. You have had many stars, dating back from the days before May Sutton to Mrs. Mallory. But, at the same time, you have never developed one as good as our Mlle. Lenglen. She happens to be an exception in development, a marvel far beyond the average product.

"NOW the same is true of Carpentier. He doesn't represent French boxing as a normal product. He is not a normal development from many generations of champions, as Dempsey is. France has never had any great heavyweight boxers. There has been no slow and sure development. But suddenly, without any warning, a genius steps forth, many generations in advance of his countrymen. In this way he is not a typical French boxer meeting a typical American boxer. He is a Lenglen meeting the pick of any nation, a phenomenon without apparent explanation, but a phenomenon with speed and skill and hitting power and amazing ring intuition. It is an astonishing thing that the same age of sport should give France a Carpentier and a Lenglen, when for so many years we had been struggling hard to develop those who might be listed as an approach to something good."

DID you ever notice how a nation is inclined to take a victory for granted, but looks with bulging eyes at a defeat? A few weeks ago, when Great Britain was mopping up with America at amateur golf, male and female, we expected to see an outburst of cheer in the sporting pages of English papers. In place of which the vast bulk of space seemed to be taken up with English reverses at cricket from the Australians and gloomy forebodings as to what might happen in the test matches at polo. The golf triumphs were taken casually. But the cricket defeats provoked numerous letters around the general theme, "What is the matter with English cricket?"

AMONG the best-known sportsmen visiting America for the championship fight is Harry Preston, who happened to be one of the committee to welcome John Lawrence Sullivan to England some thirty-five years ago. Mr. Preston is now beyond sixty, but his keen interest in boxing remains undiminished. "Sullivan," he said, "is always referred to as a slugger. But I would like to add that in his prime he was one of the fastest big men I ever saw, fast not only on his feet, but lightning fast with his demolishing hands. Remembering him as I do, it will be of great interest to see how Dempsey compares with your first champion, as I can visualize him in his prime."
