THE DAILY NOVELETTE

For Love of a Clown By JANE OSBORN

People were walking slowly, some nes stopping in front of the main wintow of Dugan's house furnishing store. There was an occasional giggle, sometimes a burst of laughter and such comments as: "Isn't he too imperti-"He's looking right at menow he's beckoning!" Such a thing for an able-bodied man to be doing!" Sarah Taylor made it a principle

Sarah Taylor made it a principle perer to stop to look in store windows. Moreover, she never lingered with the trowd. When she came by trolley to Centertown every Saturday morning from her farm, six miles out, it was with a list of needed articles to buy. She kept on walking as she turned to see what the loiterers were gazing at in Dugan's window. There she saw a long, lank clown in the usual voluminous clown suit, in wide red and white stripes. His face was chalked white His face was chalked white and he had a triangular patch of red to define his nose. He was pushing a recum cleaner with one hand over a small piece of carpet on which he had sprinkled sand. With the other he was beckening to the loiterers outside. looking straight at this one and now felt limp all over. "Sam." she whispered, "I never dreamed it was you." pered, "I never dreamed it was you. Samuel Warren, who had not recog-nized Sarah Taylor until she entered as the store, felt almost as unnerved as but he had presence of mind to lead her into a corner of the store set aside for his use in receiving prospective cusomers.

"I always thought." said Sarah,
"that I might meet you again, but I never thought it would be like this.
I'm sorry you've had such bad luck.
When I heard that your uncle had taken you into business with him I thought maybe you'd have the chance you needed."

But Sam didn't want to talk about But Sam didn't want to talk about himself. He wanted first to hear of Sarah Taylor. Eagerly he seized upon the facts she divulged. She had not married, she had gone to live on a farm left her by an uncle. She had an old farmer and his wife who helped out, but it was clear that she did much of a man's work in making a meager living out of the worn-out land.

'It was ten years ago, too,' she said with embarrassment.

'And that night when you sent me off—do you remember what you told

PETALS OF GINGHAM USED AS TRIMMING

By CORINNE LOWE

We present today the hardy, everbearing petal skirt on a checked red-and-white gingham frock, which as-serts in this way the independence of gingham from any trimming. The smart long bodice, interrupted only by a narrow girdle of self-material, is another feature lifting this model out of the ordinary.

me?" reminded Sam. "You told me I could go and stay until I made good. You told me I was a clown—and it is as a clown that you find me " laughed with genuine amusement. "You were all the time reading, and I thought you ought to be getting out and making money. I didn't know how hard it is to succeed then, Sam—I——"

"Then you wouldn't be so hard on me now?" Sam asked, and he was leaning so close to Miss Sarah Taylor that the salesfolk at Dugan's who chanced to be looking on thought he had surely "landed another order." One of them approached and Sam changed the tone of his voice. He stood up and extended the cleaner to Miss Taylor.

so only as a matter of form. He had carried it from his roadster, which he left locked a few hundred feet back in the lane.

"You had to carry that all the way from the trolley?" queried Miss Sarah Taylor. "And I don't know as I'm going to buy it after all. I haven't any electricity. I just said I wanted you to bring it so you would come out. I wanted to talk to you."

"What did you want to say?" queried Sam in a tone that made Barah feet very young again. It was only after many false starts on the part of Sam, that she was finally off with her little speech.

"Only this," she faltered, at last. "There is needed, the association has the was finally off with her care about getting ahead in the world, and now I don't care if you haven't. Sam, the farm here needs a young man, and we would at least get out living from it. It would be better than having to stand there in the window and look such a fool. I respect you fooling it, but I know times must have gone hard with you before you accepted that proposition. So, Sam, if you want to, there is a place walting here on the farm—"

Sam listened as she slowly developed her little speech. Then he laughed and took her in his arms and laughed a little more. Made good was exactly what he had done. He had been taken in by his uncle in the electrical appliances company one of the largest in the country. He was now trying to add new force to their selling department company one of the largest in the country. He was now trying to add new force to their selling department for the country. a method out of the ordinary in window displays. A good-natured looking clown would attract attention. He could look straight out at the people and beckon to the people as a man in ordinary guise could not do. What these people needed was that bit of personal contact.

The sales department said their demonstrators balked at such a proposition. They said they couldn't sell vacuum cleaners that way. But Sam thought they could. So he had started out trying it for himself. He had been doing the territory adjacent to Centertown for two weeks, and more orders had come in and there were more prospects than had ever been known in that territory before. Sam hadn't known that Sarah had moved to Centertown. He thought of her still in another State.

"I am so confused." was all the distressed Sarah could say. "Please feel that I have never said what I said."

"But why?" urged Sam in the convincing tone that had been one of his falls. TO ACT ON BEVERAGES

"But why?" urged Sam in the convincing tone that had been one of his big business assets. "If we forget that, then I'll have to take time to tell you how much I want you to marry me and come with me. But if we let your proposal stand, then we won't have to waste time on such preliminaries. We can hop right into my little roadster stowed away down the road and make tracks for the nearest marriage license bureau." Next Complete Novelette "Billy Did It"

Mineralite is a composition of mineral rock and wood fiber laid one-half inch thick over any old wooden floor. Wears like tempered steel, yet as resilient as a floor of rubber. Mineralite never loses its polished surface. It will last as long as your house and is cheaper than linoleum or tile. Warm and dry to the feet and easy to keep clean. It is jointless and laid in one solid piece.
