

FAILS TO IDENTIFY SKELETON AS SON'S

Woman Says Clothing on Bones Found Near West Chester Is Not Youth's

DETECTIVES STILL AT WORK

Mrs. Annie McNamara, 2249 St. Albans street, failed to identify the skeleton found near West Chester as that of her eighteen-year-old son Daniel, who disappeared nearly four years ago.

The headless skeleton was found wedged between a wooden silo and the side of a building on the farm of J. J. Sullivan, at East Goshen. Detectives of Chester County believe the man was murdered.

Mrs. McNamara went to West Chester yesterday and examined the shirt, trousers and shoes found on the skeleton. She did not examine the bones. From her recollection of the garments worn by her son when he disappeared, she said the clothing was not the same.

McNamara was employed as a driver by the Adams Express Co. on August 15, 1917, while returning from work, she met Mrs. Katie Campbell, 2241 St. Albans street, a friend of his mother. He had her a stranger and offered him work as a chauffeur at $6 a week more than the express company paid him.

McNamara told Mrs. Campbell he was to meet the stranger at the home of his mother on the farm. On August 16, 1917, he left his team at noon, prepared to go to work, and he has been missing ever since.

Mrs. McNamara has four other children—Marzaret, twenty years old, and Anna, eighteen, employed as stenographers in a Market street department store; Mary, sixteen, a bookkeeper in a hardware store, and John, twenty-two.

"Daniel was as good a son as a mother ever had," Mrs. McNamara, a widow, said today. "He was always thoughtful and on paydays always brought me candy or fruit. On the day he disappeared we had gone to church together."

"I have been worrying every day since he disappeared. It would give me some consolation to know what my boy's fate was, because if he was alive I know he would not have me worrying myself sick over him."

TAKE 800 KIDDIES ON PICNIC

Judge Patterson and Coroner Knight Hosts at Neshaminy Falls

Judge Patterson and Coroner Knight are hosts today to between 700 and 800 children, who were put aboard a special train at the Reading Terminal at 9:17 o'clock and taken to Neshaminy Falls.

A lot of the kids had never seen any waterfalls except the rain of the water from a fire-plug. They were gathered for the trip by Matilda Silverman, prison welfare worker, and attaches of Judge Patterson's Court and the Coroner's office went along to see that they all have a good time, or, in other words, plenty of eat.

The police band cut loose as the train pulled away from the Terminal. Some of the children were so small that their mothers went along to take care of them.

Judge Patterson's share in the picnic is in celebration of his wedding anniversary.

SPROUL'S CHARGE HITS OBERHOLTZER

Takes Responsibility for Ousting Censor, Saying He Slandered Board

DECLARES HE APOLOGIZED

"Slanderous" statements regarding the Board of Motion Picture Censors prevented the reappointment to that body of Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, according to Governor Sproul.

The Governor has issued a statement to this effect, in which he accepts full responsibility for the present membership of the board and its work.

Governor Sproul's statement follows: "The moving picture interests had absolutely nothing to do with the removal of Dr. Oberholtzer, as was well known at the time, the event being reported in the public press, a committee of producers and exhibitors visited me publicly in Harrisburg and made some complaints about what they called the 'narrowness' of the Pennsylvania censorship. I defended the censor, as I am obliged to do in the exercise of my official duty, who objected vigorously to eliminations of scenes from films produced from their books."

Oberholtzer, not attacked by the individual criticisms were largely aimed not at Dr. Oberholtzer, but at another member of the board whom I reappointed. No one connected with the moving picture industry ever asked me to remove Dr. Oberholtzer, nor was any one in that industry consulted regarding the appointment of his successor.

"It was my intention to reappoint Dr. Oberholtzer until, at about the time that his term expired, there was brought to me a letter which he had written to a woman friend of his in Pittsburgh containing slanderous and vituperative statements regarding the chairman of the board and other expressions so bitter and indecorous that I could not but feel that his usefulness as a member of the board had been destroyed, the letter having come into the possession of his associates."

"Dr. Oberholtzer apologized for his letter, but his apology did not restore conditions of harmony. After much consideration I appointed Henry Starr Richardson to a place on the board, suggesting that Dr. Oberholtzer be given a position where he might advantageously use his talents by directing the inspection of pictures to see that the intent and purpose of the law had been carried out."

Legislature's Action "During the last session of the Legislature a bill was introduced proposing reorganization of the department and providing for small increases in the salaries of the members of the board, who now receive less than one-half the salary which is being paid for similar work in the newly constituted New York Board of Censors. As the bill left our office and was introduced it contained a provision for the continuation of the place of director filled by Dr. Oberholtzer. This was stricken out by the House of Representatives. I have learned at the instance of a Philadelphia member, who considered the place an unnecessary appendage of the censor's work. "There is, therefore, no provision for the employment of Dr. Oberholtzer except through the contingent fund, and the Auditor General has taken the ground that he is not warranted in authorizing payment of a director in the face of the fact that the place was expressly omitted by the Legislature. In this he is entirely within his rights."

"It certainly must be conceded that harmonious action is as necessary for the success of the Board of Motion Picture Censors as for any other organization, public or private. As I have said on many occasions, it is my opinion that the board is now working more carefully, more systematically and with more uniformly effective results than at any time since its creation, and I am entirely satisfied with the work it is doing and the plans which it has made for carrying on the censorship in the future."

"It is co-operating cordially with the public authorities of the State and our municipalities, and its work has been studied and commended by interested parties seeking to establish similar censorship elsewhere. "I accept full responsibility for the make-up of the board and its work."

No More Extended Vacations Because of Irritated Skins

Patrolmen who court sunburn on the seashore sands as a means of extending their summer vacations will have to cool off at their own expense.

Many of the men who returned for duty recently resembled lighted pumpkins and requested post-vacations to have their burns healed. This habit greatly decreased the working force and to bring it to a halt Superintendent of Police Mills issued the following order: "No members of this bureau will receive extended vacation or off duty."

In explaining this order Superintendent Mills said: "Some members of the bureau have extended their vacation, some of them deliberately, by incurring severe cases of sunburn while on their vacation. Vacations last two weeks, the men have been in the habit of reporting to Chief Surgeon Owens with cases of sunburn which necessitated their being off for several more days. Hereafter men must work whether they have sunburn or not."

WOMAN GRATEFUL FOR DIVORCE STAY

Mrs. Daniels Was Sick and Ignorant of Law, but Found Justice

JUDGE WAS VERY KIND

Sitting on the porch of her small home at 4920 Baynton street today, Mrs. Elizabeth Daniels told her story of the divorce case that has so puzzled her.

The final decree was about to be granted John Daniels in Common Pleas Court No. 2 yesterday, when Judge Rogers held up the proceedings on the woman's appeal. She had been in the hospital and had lacked both health and funds to contest the case.

Mrs. Daniels is romantically gray, and she talked she tried to keep her thin hands from twitching. Her head bears the scars of several operations that followed a blow on the head by a baseball seventeen years ago.

"When I got back home from the hospital on June 11," she said, "I received some papers in the mail that seemed to say there was to be a meeting held in City Hall somewhere on my divorce case. I puzzled over the papers for a long time and my mother puzzled over them, but we could not make them out."

Went to Court "So I took them to a lady for whom I sometimes did housework and she advised me to go to court on June 27. So yesterday mother and I started out. We rose early and, after clearing away the breakfast dishes, we went downtown and we were good and early, too, for we got down at 8:30 o'clock. We did not know what to do or where to go and we asked lots of people on the street. Most of them turned away and some tried to help us, but we could not understand."

"It was very warm, and I had mother to take care of. I kept hold of her arm, and we wandered around. Then a kind policeman sent us to City Hall and another kind policeman in City Hall told us to go to some room. We went from room to room, and we were so weary. At last somebody took us into the courtroom."

"It was a very big room, but so stuffy and hot. And the people were crowded in so close. So we just sat there, mother and I, and waited. We did not know what everything was all about. After hours, it seemed, I heard my name called. It must be my divorce case, I know, and I got to my feet somehow, and asked the judge not to go on. He told me to come up front."

"I was terribly frightened, and everybody turned and stared, but somehow I managed to get up to a railing. I just put my hand on the railing and looked up at the judge and waited. His name was Judge Rogers. Such a kind man. If he had spoken crossly to me I never could have gone on—never. I cannot bear to be treated roughly. But he was kind, and he asked me what was the matter in such a kind way."

"So I took courage and just told him how sick I had been, and said I had no money, and could not get a lawyer to fight for me. I told him there was no one but just mother and I to fight. And he sent me to the Legal Aid, and I told them about it. The judge said if they can't take care of me he will get a lawyer who will. We got home at last, all worn out."

The master in the case had reported in favor of Mr. Daniels, and the final decree was about to be proclaimed when Mrs. Daniels arose and the proceedings were stayed. The case will be sent back to the master by Judge Rogers for further investigation.
