Nancy Wynne Talks of the Lucas-Scott Nuptials Yesterday Afternoon—She Sees Some Smart Summer Frocks—Peggy Gets Jealous

IN SPITE of our hopes to the contrary, it was HOT for Frances Scott's wedding yesterday afternoon. But wasn't it a pretty wedding? I thought the bride looked lovely and the bridesmaids' frocks were sweet. Eleanor Newbold, who is the bride's first cousin, and was matron of honor, and was matron of honor...

Finally as her mother exclaimed, "Oh, did you ever see such darling feet?" Peggy could not stand it a minute more. The green-eyed monster reared large and forceful in her two-year mind and, edging up to mother, she whispered in trembling accents, "Mamma, I got feet, too." NANCY WYNNE.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES An engagement of interest to this and other cities is that of Miss Muriel MacCreedy, of Cambridge, Mass., formerly of Newton, Mass., and the Rev. Walter George Read, formerly of this city, now of Brighton, Mass. Mr. Read is a brother of Mrs. George Buckley and a cousin of Mrs. James Large, of Sumnercrest, Chestnut Hill. Miss MacCreedy is a graduate of Radcliffe College, class of 1921. The wedding of Miss MacCreedy and the Rev. Mr. Read will take place in July.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brinton Phillips, of 2007 De Lancey place, who are spending the summer traveling in Europe, are at present in Rome, Italy. Mr. William A. Platt and her daughter, Miss Christine F. Chambers, who are spending some time in Rome.

Does it not seem as if we would never learn to be careful in our conversations and telephone talks? You know how often you get on a crossed wire yourself, and could hear a conversation if you wanted to listen in. And yet you never learn. I was musings on this the other day when riding in the trolley (it was Route No. 90) I heard two women discussing another by name and saying most extraordinarily unkind things.

Several women and men in the car besides myself turned and looked at them, but they talked peacefully on, evidently oblivious of the fact that anyone was eavesdropping. As it happened, one person did know the one discussed very well, and some of the things said were not true, and those that were true were not kind or worthy of remark.

It only goes to show how careful we should be. Not only not to take away another's character from principle, but also if we must do it and cannot restrain our tongues, let us choose a place where we will not be overheard by many whether they want to listen or not.

AREN'T the dotted Swiss pretties A this season? I saw Celeste Warder in town the other day wearing a family of dark brown Swiss, dotted in white, made with a wide hemmed skirt and three little cream-colored ruffles around the hips. The neck and sleeves were edged with cream color, and her hat was a large brown garden affair, trimmed with white flowers.

Lysbeth Boyd looked awfully well in a green and white blockedingham, made in one piece and worn with a narrow belt. She was wearing a soft gray felt hat, which was very becoming to her. Lysbeth is tall, and has the loveliest golden curly hair.

DID you hear what a lovely time the Strawbridge girls, Helen and Janet, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Strawbridge, of Bala, are going to have this summer? They will sail next month for Europe and visit England, France, Switzerland, Holland and Italy, before returning in the latter part of September. Mrs. Strawbridge has entirely recovered from her severe illness of last year, and she has been doing some splendid work talking to the business girls in various clubs. She has the greatest understanding of girls and always reaches them, makes them want to talk with and confide in her. She is a very charming woman.

PEGGY went with mother to visit Aunt M— and to see her wonderful new baby daughter, who is three months old and who has come on here to visit. Now Peggy's mamma had not seen the new baby either, and so after greetings and showing the wee scrap of smiles and dimples and kicks and crows to Peggy, who admired it duly, that small person was left to amuse herself while the two women had a long talk interspersed with ejaculation on the part of Peggy's mother about the new baby: "Oh, hasn't she lovely eyes?" And, "My dear, what tiny hands?"
