

THE DAILY NOVELETTE
The Key to Happiness

By MARTH McCULLOCH-WIL-LIAMS

Fate ordained for them a proper meeting place—the exact center of the big road. She walked it with bent head, eyes intent on the ground. Thus he might have collided with him had he not said pleasantly, drawing slightly aside, "You have lost something. May I help find it?"

"If only you will!" she cried. "It's the smokehouse key, and all things edible were dumped inside in the hurry of the morning. And now there's no getting at them—with a hat-stamped family just an hour away. Ravenous enough—almost—to eat me if they find nothing else."

"That mustn't happen—better commandeer food," he laughed. "Tell me where you lost the key—and if you are quite sure you did lose it?"

fully. Smiling, he followed her to the sagging garden gate. It had been opened recently. Inside, under honey-suckles in full flower, they saw Joe and Babs, with locked hands and eyes of centary. "Why—I do believe he's the man," Lettice breathed rather than said. "And I know she's the woman," Graham supplemented. "They have found the key they lost—the key to happiness." Next complete novelette—An Old Man's Gold.

A Gruelling Test Proves OILDAG

O I PLUS Deflocculated Acheson Graphite

Is the World's Best Lubricant

Starting from 58 West New York street, a Marmon Sedan and a Pierce-Arrow car, with the oil drained from their motors, were driven 18 7-10 miles through Indianapolis streets.

This amazing achievement was made possible by the GRAPH-
OID SURFACE formed from using OILDAG.

What Is OILDAG?

OILDAG is colloidal graphite, an invention by Dr. Acheson, the inventor of carborundum; held in suspension in a high-grade lubricating oil.

This ultra-microscopic graphite amalgamates with the cylinder walls, bearings, etc., and forms a graphoid surface which reduces friction to a minimum.

Mr. Chester Ricker, Technical Representative, Indianapolis Speedway, who was officially in charge of this test, makes the following statement:

"This is to certify that under my personal supervision the lubricating systems and crank cases of a Marmon Sedan and a Pierce-Arrow Roadster were completely drained; and the cars were then operated through the streets of Indianapolis for a distance of 18 7-10 miles without oil.

At the end of the run both motors were cool and apparently running in perfect condition. The Marmon engine was torn down and found to be perfectly normal as regards wear and mechanical condition; the graphoid surface produced by the use of Oildag having apparently prevented damage to bearing surfaces throughout the motor.

It is self-evident that the graphoid surfaces must be frictionless to enable a motor to perform this extraordinary feat."

Signed, CHESTER S. RICKER,
Consulting Automotive Engineer.

A similar test was scheduled for Philadelphia yesterday, but the car was wrecked in transportation and it was necessary to postpone the test until Friday, July 8th.

Watch for further announcement or write any of the list below for information.
