

Dempsey Possesses Right Which Is Capable of Separating Georges' Head From His Shoulders

TOWIN, CARPENTIER MUST SOCK JACK IN FIRST TWO ROUNDS

Unless Frenchman's Right Can Tap Champion's Jaw Early in Fight His Chances of Grabbing Title Are Not So Good

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL
Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

Atlantic City, July 1. WITHIN the next twenty-four hours another brief paragraph is going to be added to the classic history of fistiana. Both Jacques Dempsey and Georges Carpentier are all set and the curtain is about to be rung up on the greatest international fist drama since Charlie Mitchell, of England, was hovering in the offing when John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett were the main frigates of war.

Now that everything is set there is no use in passing any more blarney about what is what. Dempsey appears to be a better man than Georges Carpentier ever was or will be. There are a lot of elements which hand the champion this call to supremacy.

In the first place Dempsey is a murderous puncher. He packs a wallop probably half again as hard as Carpentier's and he has it in both hands. Carpentier has a deadly right hand, straight cross punch that he has developed to an exact science. It brought down Beckett, it brought down Levinsky and it knocked Bombardier Wells goggle-eyed.

Measured against Dempsey Carpentier has a right which is capable of knocking Carpentier's head loose from his shoulders. As for the left, Carpentier has a fine straight left as straight lefts go, but Dempsey can hit harder with his left than he can with his right. He broke Willard's cheek bone with that left, and it is doubtful if Jeffries, in his palmy days, could have inflicted a harder wallop.

But there are other factors. A lot has been said about the advantage that Carpentier's superior speed and brains will give him. Granting all that has been written on these things, it must not be forgotten that Dempsey, in action, is a lashing whirlwind of fists, and that any brains he may lack are made up for by marvelous fighting instinct. In other words, Dempsey always seems to do the right thing at the right time without having to stop to think about it. His body reacts without conscious direction. He has fighting instinct down to the ultimate degree.

Added to this there is that old difference in weight and a degree of ruggedness favoring Dempsey which Carpentier does not even approach. In plain brute strength there is absolutely no comparison; it is all Dempsey.

In other words, Dempsey is a true, natural fighting man, while the challenger is a scientifically made one.

Now to get down to what may happen tomorrow. It must be remembered that Carpentier has a knockout punch in his right. He can knock Dempsey out—if he lands.

Dempsey is not in as good condition today as he was when he met Willard. A slight edge of the old speed is missing and he is slightly overweight, but in excellent condition nevertheless.

Carpentier undoubtedly can hit Dempsey, and will unless Jack's first punch knocks him out.

But all Carpentier's chances of victory seem to be centered on one campaign. It is inconceivable to think that the fight will go twelve rounds with the Frenchman's sheer boxing ability enabling him to stay.

To win Carpentier must get Dempsey in the first two rounds. Dempsey will leave openings, and the Frenchman will have to pick one of them early in the fight and slip across the straight right which he delivers with a leap like a jackrabbit.

If he fails in this he is done. If that right misses, Dempsey will tear his body apart, and if the bout goes over two rounds everything points to Dempsey crushing him down with those terrific punches to the stomach and heart, followed by that famous left hook to the head.

THAT sums up all the advance dope. There is a chance that it all may be knocked into a cocked hat. The bout may go twelve rounds without either being floored. But Dempsey should win by a knockout, and there are about three chances that he will to one that he won't.

Champion Loafs Away Last Day at Shore

Dempsey loafed away his last day at his training camp at the Airport yesterday. Before the sun sets this afternoon Jack will have left the seashore for the scene of the battle, and he will spend the night before the contest in the defense of his crown against Carpentier, the invader, somewhere in Jersey City. No one knows the time of Dempsey's departure from here and no one knows what he will be doing in Jersey City. In fact, America's representative in the international contest doesn't know himself the location of the private residence where he will stay. Jack Kearns is guarding that secret.

Yesterday afternoon was Dempsey's last on the porch of the White House where he has made his home during ten weeks of strict training. Surrounded by his handlers, sparring partners et al., a merry time was had by all, although Dempsey showed some signs of being serious. Once he forgot himself and took a strange look at Joe Benjamin, one of his sparring partners, when the California lightweight attempted to show his ability as a singer, but it was all in fun. Benjamin had to cry "Uncle" before Dempsey let go his grip.

BESIDES the alleged singing there also was a general flow of conversation on almost every subject but boxing.

Dempsey Takes Shot at "Experts"

A RAIN-SOAKED messenger boy, while delivering a yellow, sealed envelope, gave Dempsey the inspiration to take a sock at several newspaper men who were included in the porch party. "What road are you going to put him away, Jack?" asked the boy. "Wait for forty-eight hours more," was the champion's come-back, "then I'll be an expert on the fight myself. See these guys here—they all think they are experts. Ask them."

Hundreds of telegrams arrived during the day, which was a busy one for all attaches of the camp. While Dempsey was loafing around, keeping in out of the rain, telegrams and traveling bags were packed for the departure today.

The first ones to leave camp for Jersey City were Dempsey's three Belgian police dogs. These animals have been with Jack throughout his entire training stay at the Airport. Jack's brother, Bernard, was custodian of the dogs on their trip from Atlantic City, it being made by motor in the champion's limousine.

BEGINNING with 9 o'clock, the Reading station here this morning began to fill with sunburnt people who were anxious to get a final glimpse of Dempsey leaving the city. None of them knew the time of leaving, nor did they seem to care. They wanted to be sure, however, that they would be among those there to see Jack off.

Boots and Saddle

The Porter has not started in a race in some time, and is entered in the Licking Handicap at Latonia today. If he is in half-way condition he should win the race. LaRabee and MacIntyre appear to be the contenders. Other horses well placed are: First race—John S. Beardon, All Right Sir, Sir Lancelot; second—Tampier, Sir Hugh, Vitamin; third—Rapid Stride, Melvin, Fifi H; fourth—Ben Valet, Mince, The Time, Rapid Day; sixth—Fair Phantom, Martha Fallon, Wayward Lady; seventh—Tulsa, Tribune, Young Adam.

At Aqueduct—First race—Zenotta, Steeple, Goodheart; second—Edwina, Elected, Penrose; third—Tom McGarrart, Trooper, Jack Scott; fourth—Knobble, Captain, Alcock, Dr. Joe; fifth—Egmont, Ultimate, Balance; sixth—Courtview, Curfew, Copper Demon.

Movement which made a new record for the Woodford Stakes, which was held on Wednesday, was made by a colt named "The Winner," who was trained by a man named "The Winner." He has won the race in a record time of 1:10.4.

Two great stake events are set to be run at Latonia on Wednesday. The first is the $100,000 race for a stock horse. The horse is expected to be a colt named "The Winner," who was trained by a man named "The Winner." He has won the race in a record time of 1:10.4.

The head-to-head horses are making a fine showing at Latonia. Four of the winners in one day this week were British bred—Bill and Low, by Colby, British Lord and Best Pal.

Leonardo II is to be retired from racing. He will be returned to the Xalapa Farm in Kentucky for a stock horse. The horse is one of the speediest ever developed, but had lost weight to carry him at his terrific pace. He strained a ligament in the tibia of the left hind leg.

The Windsor meeting will attract an interesting patronage. The program is expected to be a success. The horse is one of the speediest ever developed, but had lost weight to carry him at his terrific pace. He strained a ligament in the tibia of the left hind leg.

Steve Laver is looking for a match for himself at Atlantic City in two weeks. He is expected to be a success. The horse is one of the speediest ever developed, but had lost weight to carry him at his terrific pace. He strained a ligament in the tibia of the left hind leg.

Steve Daniels is in it for good and ready for any at any of the winners.

TWO PHIL VETERANS TRADED TO GIANTS

Stengel and Rawlings Go to Gotham for Rapp, King and Richburg in Straight Swap

A'S NEAR SEVENTH PLACE

The Phillies are at it again. After hearing for days that no trades would be made but that the Phils were on the market for any good baseball player the swap was made that confirms the many rumors that traveled around baseball circles since and during the visit of the New York Giants to this city recently. This morning it was announced that Casey Stengel, star outfielder, and Johnny Rawlings, regular second baseman, had been traded to Met's club for Lee King, utility infielder; George Richburg, alternate third baseman, and Lenx Richburg, an unknown recruit.

Rawlings has been playing a banquet game at the key stone sack for Donovan and his mates and has expected to remain with the team as a regular. The peppery little second sacker who came from the Braves to the locals last year according to the official batting averages of last week was hitting at .285 average for fifty-four games. Casey Stengel has appeared in but twenty-two games this season, most of the time as a pinch runner, but he was second on the list of last week, with .321. Stengel has had a long career in the majors, starting with Brooklyn, where he remained for many years, and then he did not play, and then to this city. He has been suffering from a bad arm this year and has seen little active duty.

Of the three new men to wear the uniform of the Phils nothing is known about Richburg. He doesn't even appear in the batting averages and evidently is one of the recruits McGraw has had on the bench this year. He went on the training trip, but never played as a regular since his return.

Rapp Minor League Star
Gollie Rapp will be remembered as the high-priced minor league star purchased by McGraw previous to the trading season last year. He was started at the hot corner when the Giants returned from the South. Rapp being moved over to second base to back up the big slugger, he played brilliantly in the field and hit well at the start, but of late has not been using his willow with much effectiveness, and as a result has been alternating with Lee King at the hot corner in fifty-two games Rapp hit for a .221 average.

Lee King will be with the Giants last year, being used occasionally in center field. He came originally from Pittsburgh and has had three games in the beautiful average of .190. In the recent series between the Giants and the Phils King entered a game in the sixth inning and managed to share one single out of three trips to the plate. He snared two flies in the outfield.

Rapp will in all probability be seen at the base this afternoon, with Jimmy Smith, who has been playing in a straight swap with Rapp. King can hardly expect to dislodge any of the Philly outfielders at present, for the trio of Mense, Williams and Lehoucq is hitting and fielding in great shape.

Pirates Increase Lead
While the Giants were idle yesterday, unable to make hay because the sun was not shining in Boston, the Pirates added two victories to their position in the lead. The two victories widened the lead between the Pirates and the Giants to five full games, a nice working margin, though not a big one, with so many double-headers in the coming week. The first was scored in one of those protested affairs when a runner is on base in such and such an inning and so on. Yesterday it started in the last half of the eighth with the Pirates leading 3-2. The Pirates had third with Senor Luque on the mound for the Reds. The Pirates failed to count another run in this frame, but while the Cuban for sufficient hits to capture the game in the ninth.

In the second frames Yellow Horse, the Indian, twirled his best game, defeating the Reds 5 to 3. Luque was the victim in this game also. The Injun permitted but eight hits.

N. Y. HOTELS CROWDED WITH VISITING FIGHT FANS

Enthusiasts From All Sections of Country Await Tomorrow

New York, July 1.—New York hotels were crowded today with fighting fans from all sections of the country. The hotels, dining rooms or hallways there was a buzz of conversation, in which the words "Dempsey and Carpentier" were heard on every tongue.

Fully 5000 out-of-town folks registered yesterday, who announced their intention of seeing the championship bout tomorrow at Jersey City. An estimated 20,000 were expected to flow in today from every quarter of the continent.

Those arriving yesterday included residents of cities from Medicine Hat to Miami and from Bangor to El Paso. At all the large hotels it was said there would be difficulty in caring for guests who had not made reservations. Most of the larger hostilities announced that they planned to install arm cots in corridors, or the roofs and in other places not often slept in.

Many of the out-of-town enthusiasts were accompanied by their wives and daughters, who were no less enthusiastic than husband or father. In fashionable dining rooms there could be heard fight talk at nearly every table, where superbly dressed women sat with conventionally dressed men.

The outcome of the contest was, of course, the main topic of conversation, and over many a cup of coffee the battle was prematurely fought, each enthusiast explaining just how his or her favorite would emerge victorious.

CAMDEN BARS FIGHT PICTURES ON JULY 4

Notify Holders of Film Rights They Cannot Be Shown Before Tuesday

Camden authorities have objected so strenuously to showing the motion pictures of the international scrap on July 4, a national holiday, that the holders of the film rights have been notified they cannot show them on the screen until Tuesday, July 6.

It originally had been planned to show the pictures in Camden and other New Jersey towns (the pictures being barred in other states) Monday morning.

Joe Ohl, former secretary to Connie Mack, of the Athletics, who is representing Tex Rickard in the pictures in question, announced that the first showing will take place Tuesday.

It will be the first time in the history of boxing that the actual blows by the combatants will be shown fifteen times slower than the speed of the regular combat, which should settle all arguments as to how a certain punch was delivered.

STRAWBRIDGE HAS TEAM OF SLUGGERS

Work With Willow Has Been Dominating Factor in Wonderful Success of 1921 Club

HARD GAMES ARE BOOKED

Looking over the baseball records for the first month or two of the local season does not present a hard problem when it comes to reasoning why the Strawbridge & Clothier nine has been so successful in its games played thus far.

Seven contests have been participated in to date and one was scheduled on Saturday, June 19, with Delaware City, but that team failed to put in an appearance. Hitting, the same factor that has been so prominent in the major league box scores, has carried the "Truitts" aggregation to victory nearly every time.

The only occasion when the locals were outdistanced in slugging honors was last Saturday in the game with the Harrisburg Motive Power aggregation and then they won out by the score of 5 to 3. Some of the games were so one-sided they proved mere batting matings for the heavy store sluggers, who have shown nifty sticksmanship when on places at such names as Ad Swigler and Pete Curtis.

St. Carthage Swamped

The season opened with the St. Carthage Club and the score was 17 to 0. The next Saturday the Philadelphia Police were entertained and handed a 11-0 reverse. Then came Jimmy Hunter and his Hoopes and Townsend Ironworkers, who were only noised out 3 to 1. This team has played a half dozen such games this season, but has been passed up for some reason by the more prominent local clubs.

The Masonic A. A. of Washington, was beaten on Decoration Day, 5 to 3, and was the last game pitched by Victor Keene. This hurler was "discovered" by Manager Truit and his wonderful work attracted the attention of the local scouts.

He was soon receiving five and six offers a day and at last succumbed to one by Dobson. But Keene is evidently of a wandering disposition. He has won twenty-six games this year and it was reported today that he has deserted Dobson and now pitched for the South, where he will pitch.

Truit on the Job
Manager Truit immediately became busy and now has Pitchers Yowell and Big George Earnshaw, who are turning in victories with regularity. The pitcher was not the only player "stolen." Others were secured away by tempting offers, but Manager Truit has proven his ability by filling their places on each occasion with even more competent talent.

The record of the club and its opponents is best told in the following table:

FINISH ARENA TODAY

Yesterday's Rain Prevents Finishing Touches Being Applied

New York, July 1.—The arena where the Dempsey-Carpentier bout will be held will not be completed until today. Yesterday's rain prevented the finishing touches being applied as expected. Skilled workers and laborers toiled until dark last night in an overtime session, calculating to make up for some of the lost time.

The ring has been installed and is covered with a tarpaulin protection against the bad weather. Promoter Rickard said the platform was elevated to a height of about four feet six inches. The ring-side chairs, however, have not yet been placed in their position in the 850 section, and the work of numbering the seats by stencil and paper numerals is yet to be finished. This work will be completed today.
