

CLERGYMEN URGE RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

Bishop Garland and Dr. R. W.
Miller Speak in Old Pine
Street Church

ASK INTERNATIONAL PACT

Appeal for preservation of the ideals of religious freedom with which the Nation was founded was made at Fourth of July services in the Old Pine Street Presbyterian Church yesterday. Both Bishop Garland and the Rev. Dr. Rufus W. Miller warned against forces aiming to undermine the Christian foundations of the Nations, and asked to see the United States in an association of nations which would enable Europe to rehabilitate itself.

Representatives of numerous patriotic organizations, including the G.W. Town Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, posts of the American Legion and descendants of the signers of the Declaration of Independence attended the service. Mayor Moore and other city officials were among those present.

Bishop Garland and Doctor Miller represented two of the religious bodies which had gathered in Philadelphia during the Revolution. All of the clergy taking part in the exercises represented religious bodies which were influential in the city's activities in the days of Washington and Franklin. The Rev. Dr. Victor Herbert Lukens, pastor of Old Pine Street Church, offered the invocation and the Rev. Jacob S. Hough, the veteran pastor of Old St. George's Methodist Episcopal Church, led the responsive reading. The Rev. Dr. Edward Hoyt Dolk, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, and the Rev. Dr. Carter Holm Jones, pastor of the First Baptist Church, offered prayers.

First a Protestant Nation

Bishop Garland said America was founded as a "Protestant nation" and "Christian nation," and it behoves all latter-day Americans to protect the country's birthright. He said the Colonies were populated mostly by English-speaking people, although there were also Swedes, Dutch, French and Germans.

Bishop Garland said there have been "insidious attacks" upon American institutions in various ways. "One is on our public school system," he declared. "Many pretend to believe in our public schools and yet they want to rewrite our history so as to make us believe that the Nation was not founded by men with religious ideals. There are men who vilify the character of George Washington. They say he was not a religious man. But we know he was a churchman and a vestryman and that in a letter to Congress he upheld the things for which the Church stands."

Dr. Miller on Democracy

Dr. Miller, general secretary of the Publication and Sunday School Board of the Reformed Church in the United States, spoke on "The Christian Church and Democracy." He urged the message of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ advocating a League of Nations, and said:

"As a debt of gratitude to Europe America should enter into some form of an association of nations and bring the good will to Europe by her efforts. Let us have in mind the well-being of the greatest number, not only in America but throughout the world."

AUTO UPROOTS A TREE

Driver Is Cut as Car Hits Rope, Pulling Down Trunk

As Harry Blum, of 1225 Wyoming avenue, was driving his automobile west on Washington avenue last night, the car struck a rope that had been stretched across the thoroughfare at Sixty-third street to prevent traffic from interfering with the Fourth of July celebration of the Cobbs Creek Parkway Homecoming. The force of the impact with which the wire hit the tree to which it was attached on each side of the street.
