How to Make Raspberry Jam (By a Jam Maker)

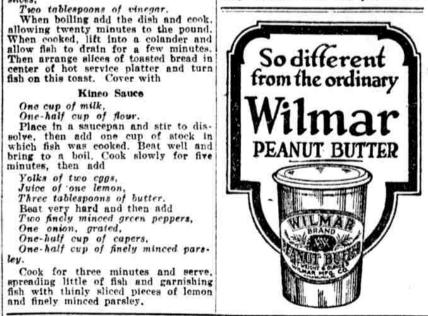

The finest raspberry jam you ever tested—chock full of the natural ripe too and fiavor—can be made at home within a few minutes after the raspberries are washed. I use the "Certo Precess" because it takes only one minute's boiling, thus saving flavor and color; here were falls; and is cheaper because I get two-thirds more jam from the same amount of raspberries.

Making More Money

It was only a little more than a year ago that Miss Rees Davis abandoned a successful stage carear to enter the business arena as a designer and manufacturer of toys, not because she didn't theroughly enjoy stage life, but because she felt that the future was distinctly limited and business of a more stable kind would be worth a lot more to her in the years to come.

"My grandmother taught me to enjoy the little things of life," said Miss Davis recently, while discussing her changed viewpoint, "and led indirectly to my choice of a business. One of my earliest recollections is making toys from potatoes and other vegetables under her direction, and she also showed me how to get the most out of them. When I was only eight years old I remember making playthings for my own amusement, and on the stage my spare moments were always utilized in designing dolls and toys. "Just about the time I was looking for some novelty which would have an appeal for the majority of children my pet buildog took it into his head not to permit himself to be bathed. He just simply wouldn't get into the tub and that was all there was to it—until I chanced to throw a rubber ball of which he was very fond into the water. In he went, and was content to stay there and play while being washed. 'If a dog will do that, why shouldn't children do the same.' I asked myself and started right in to design and make a number of rubber toys which would appeal to the kiddies during their bathtime. I didn't have much trouble in selling them, either. In fact, the principal difficulty was in filling the orders, for I was careful to experiment on children I knew, and thus always struck something that hit the fancy of youngsters as a whole. Now I've got my own factory finish, however is this item as found on the effective frock illustrated today. The dress is a heavy brown silk in tussab weave, and is trimmed only with tussab weave, and is trimmed only with a double plaited quilling of self-material. This is found on the two apron tunies—front and back—which differ from the usual variety by being prolonged to the hem of the skirt, and on draped collar and short sleeves.

Not What Cheap Silks But What Good Silks

was our aim in preparing this annual Sale of Summer Silks. It is easy to see that any one of the silks is "worth making up." The 35-inch taffeta at $1.85 is soft, silky and with the luster and "swish" of excellent quality. The 40-inch crepe meteor at $2.85 is delightfully heavy and it slips through the fingers almost like quicksilver. The navy and black messaline at $1.65 is uncommonly weighty and measures 35 inches wide.

39-inch sports silks, of fiber silk and cotton, are in effective patterns for skirts at $1.85.
