BANKER RESIGNS BUTTERWECK CASE

Allentown. Pa., July 12. — Some startling details were revealed yesterday at a meeting of the creditors of Harry A. Butterweck, before John G. Diefen-derfer, Federal Referee in Bankruptey. Arthur G. Dewalt, former Congress-man, announced he intended to crossexamine Fred H. Sterner, manager of

"We wouldn't have," she reminded.

The crowd that came to the hear-ing was disappointed to find Mr. Dewalt absent, without any explanation, al-though Mr. Sterner was there with his books and retinue of bookkcepers to show he had not received any money from Butterweck. Reuben J. Butz, president of the Ai-lentown National Bank, presented his resignation as attorney for the trustee in bankruptcy, former Mayor Charles O. Hunsicker, Mr. Butz stated he did not care to have his reputation impugned by anybody and was perfectly willing to let others take up what would be a thankless job. Since some credi-tors of Butterwick had taken upon declared he desired to give them a free hand. He invited them to ask him how he had managed so far to salvage $25.

Mr. Butz completed his statement Mr. Butz completed his statement with a list of thirty-one cases of mort-gages, which he declared had been duplicated by Butterwick, with losses amounting to $195,730. This recital, Mr. Butz said, was only a partial enumeration of information gathered to date by the trustee. John Allen, former Councilman, who lost many thousands, made an address, during which he wept, declaring it was his belief that Sterner had the money raised by Butterweck, and he did not believe that Butterweck was all devil and Sterner all angel. To this Mr. Butz replied that Sterner was present with his books ready to be questioned, and he added that Sterner had not obtained any money at all as a pre-ferred creditor, but would come in only for his share, the same as any other creditor.

With the men under fire eager to testify that they have none of the money, and with them not being called up, the puzzle as to what became of the money now is greater than ever.

POTATO GRADING FAILS

Only a Few Growers Can Agree Important Marketing Step

Highstown, N. J., July 12. - Inability of factions among potato growers in the Central Jersey agricultural counties to get together on plans for grading clearing his their crop make it appear likely that this important step in marketing strongly advocated by leading agriculturists may be postponed for another yeaz. The grading plan, however, will be used by many individual farmers and shippers, the State and Federal au-thorities having agreed on standards. It will be a guarantee to the buyer and a defense to the shipper against rejec-tion of his goods on a distant market, Digging of the big crop will begin next week. While the drought has in-jured a large acreage, thousands of enrloads will be shipped out of this sec-tion.
