

Will Limit Tennis Activity Considerably Before Davis Cup Challenge Round

BOOSTS INDIAN NET PLAYERS

New York, July 14 .- In every respec but one the Bill Tilden that arrived here on board the steamship from England was the same Tilden that began the most arduous campaign in tennis history more than fourteen months ago -cheerful, boyish, effervescent. The only difference was in the mat ter of his physical condition. One's judgment of his condition may have a influenced by the frequent reports from England and France on the subect recently, but he did not look like tired athlete, and it was not difficult to understand how one of the British critics, in commenting on the British tennis challenge round, came to refer to the world's champion's "convalescent" appearance. Tiden did not care to go into any details about his condition, and after details about his condition, and "feel-serving his friends that he was "feelfine" changed the subject. "I am mely glad to be heme," he snid, and needless to say I greatly appreci-e the kindly interest of my fellow Americans in my playing abroad." He was referring to the numerous congratulatory telegrams and letters that were handed to him. The tennis however, had a confidential hat with Samuel Hardy, the Davis up team captain, after his other riends had left, and Hardy said later that Tilden realized he needed a rest and that, while he would appear in several tournaments before the Davis Cup challenge round he would limit his

"The fact is that Tilden was not in good condition during most of the trip," said Hardy, "although he would be the to advance such an alibi. He was afflicted with boils in France to the extent that he had to undergo a slight operation that laid him up for a few Naturally it affected his play considerably, and under the circum-stances he deserves great credit for de-fending his British championship sucresafully and for winning the world's hard court tile at St. Cloud."
