Bricks
and Cows.

A SKED to give an illustration of extreme waste, an economist mentioned the practice of throwing bricks at cows, which he said not only wasted actual revenue by lessening the yield of milk, but also wasted the potential revenue from the rent-producing houses that might have been built with the bricks.

A brick house, like a high-grade cow, is a great revenue-producer; but unlike the cow, the brick house costs the owner less than a house built of any other fireproof material. Therefore, while the cow's value soon begins to decrease, that of the brick house goes on steadily increasing.

Bricks are cheaper now for years past, and houses are in great demand.

When you want any information about brick houses, kinds, colors, qualities, styles, uses or prices, the products of different makers, how to word specifications, names of competent architects, builders, engineers, etc., call up either of our offices:
