other child, is still in Europe with her family. Mrs. Rice was among the women who received at the large affair given in Newport on Friday for the incoming officers of the War College there. I hear also that Mr. and Mrs. Morris received at the affair. Philadelphia is usually well represented at all the big doings in Newport, but there are not so many Philadelphians at Southampton., which is now even more fashionable than the New England-Mrs. James Francis , Sullivan and her two daughters will go there next menth to stay for several weeks. You know, Mrs. Sullivan's small grandson lives there in the summertime with his grandmother Hoffman.

wearing a most stunning get-up. The frock was of gray crepe de chine and was made with an accordion pleated skirt and cut fairly short. There was an Eton jacket which met at the neck and opened over a vertee of lace and a narrow sash was arranged about the waist twice and tied at the side. The frock was topped with a large hat of deep yellow, trimmed with a yellow silk

T SAID fairly short skirt when de-A scribing Frankic Sullivan's costume Have you noticed that the dresses really are a good deal longer than they were in the early spring than they were in that is the new and last summer, that is the new dresses which are coming over from the other side. You see Frankie returned just a few weeks ago from Paris, where she bought some lovely things and her frock is decidedly longer.

TF YOU have a young brother who goes about a great deal and stays the homes of his various friends, a will know what I mean when you to sort the wash each week. You'll d Jim T's handkerchief and Jack

Well, they picked him up and hurried well, they picked him up and harried him off to the hospital. And though he began to show signs of consciousness, he could not tell his name. "That's all right." said one of the nurses. "Here's his name on his handkerchief." It took but an instant to look up the telephone number attached to that name and in a few minutes Mrs. M was being told that her son Jim M was at the hospital, having had an auto There was decided amaze-It seems that Jim M —— was at that moment sitting next to mother at phone. And so it went. A name discovered on another article of clothing. That was it, he's borrowed clothing. That was it, he's borrowed the handkerchief from some one and the handkerchi name. Do you wonder there was some doubt when it was found to be entirely different to the various names which had been discovered on his clothing. He was able to go home by now, but the authorities felt he had better be de-tained until identified. Certainly he had with him many things he apparently did not belong to. So the mother whose name and number he gave was called to the telephone and told that the hospital had an accident case there, and that while the patient had only suffered from shock and temporary unconsciousness. it was felt that he could not be dis-charged until identified. And said "Madame, he says he is your son, but he is carrying Jim M's handkerchief; he is wearing Joe R's shirt; his socks are marked David S—, and most of his other garments have dif-ferent names."

"Did you say he's all right?" said a sweet rather worried voice. "We said he is all right Madame, but we he not at all sure he is your son. We must ask you to come down here and identify him." "Oh." said the little "that's Tom all right. He's always wearing other people's clothes and leaving his things at the other boys' houses." NANCY WYNNE.
