

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Tells of the Many Philadelphians at Bar Harbor and York Harbor This Summer. She Sees a Pretty Frock—Other Bits

It's remarkable how popular the Maine harbors are to Philadelphians. Not only do they attract more of us than the others, but Bar Harbor and York Harbor are close second and third. And a great many go to Winthrop Harbor, too.

This summer the Dr. Witt Cuyler have gone, as usual, to Bar Harbor and have opened their handsome cottage there. Miss Frances Cuyler is with her parents, and later in the season the Joseph Walkers will visit them. The Walkers were Eleanor Cuyler, who was married about a year ago, and her husband, Mr. Cuyler, who is now in the service.

Mrs. Fearing's mother, Mrs. Hildegarde Porter, who has lived for a number of years in Washington, usually goes to Bar Harbor, and her other daughter, Mrs. Codman, widow of Bishop Codman, of Maine, spends her summers there. Her wedding anniversary was the subject of the event of the season in that resort. It was a short-lived happiness for the bishop and his bride, who was Margaretta Porter. He died of cancer of the stomach after his marriage.

Catherine Porter, the third of the sisters, did wonderful work during the war, and receives all kinds of decorations from France and Belgium.

Mr. Henry Cadwalader Chapman is at Bar Harbor, and Mr. William Hopkins and his sister, Miss Ellen Hopkins. The latter is in the service, and Mr. Edward Morrell, who usually spends every summer at her beautiful villa, has been abroad, and I am not mistaken, has yet returned home. She has had a most wonderful trip, having been in Europe since early spring, and has traveled all through Italy, and been in Rome, where she had an audience with the Pope. Mr. Morrell, whose husband, the late Edward de V. Morrell, was a stepson of the well-known lawyer and art connoisseur, John J. Johnson, lives usually at Tarrytown.

Mrs. William Lytleton Savage is spending part of the summer at Bar Harbor and the Negropoulos are also there, and ever so many others.

YORK HARBOR seems almost as gay as Bar Harbor, and a number of Philadelphians go to it. Mrs. Wood, of the city, and her sister, Miss Woodville, is with her. The Boyer Davises have a villa there, and the Marshall Skells have one. This year, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore D. Jones, Mr. Charles W. Fox, the late James Morgan Hebard, Gerald Holman, Evans Roberts and Henry Groves are also in the Philadelphia colony.

I SAW Margaretta Jones Thayer last Sunday in Chestnut Hill, and although she was wearing a pretty yellow linen dress, trimmed with white lace collar and cuffs. Her hat was a large yellow straw, with a blue ribbon bow in the front. The back was turned up with a severe flare.

TOM and Jack, aged four and six, respectively, had their baths, were put into nightclothes, and one of them pranced into their bed on one of those recent nights. Mother then, having given a deep sigh of relief, went to her room, and a possible breeze. But it was not long. Suddenly a wall arose. "Mutter, make Jack lay on his side up his bed," "Jack," called mother, "don't worry your own side." "I am, Mother," called Jack. "Well, all right," answered mother. "But, Mutter," insisted Tommy, "he calls his side the middle up his bed."

CARNIVAL, AN ENGLISH FILM, MAKES BIG HIT

Stanley Has Tony Sarg Novelty as an Added Feature

Stanley—"The Great Adventure" will be best known to many people as "Buried Alive," which Arnold Bennett wrote. This was one of his most popular stories and now that the popular actor, Lionel Barrymore, is playing the leading role, the film version promises to be equally successful. Lionel is a much better player in roles of this sort than those in which he has lately been appearing.

Kenneth Webb directed this story, which tells how an eccentric artist, who, in order to elude a celebrity hunter with matrimony as her object, conceals his identity by posing as his dead valet. He goes to "his own" funeral in Westminster Abbey. The fact that a pretty little widow mistakes him for the late valet, Leek, with whom she had been corresponding through a matrimonial agency, adds considerably to the complications which pile themselves on the shoulders of the woman—dodging, publicity-shunning artist.

Supporting Mr. Barrymore in the leading feminine role is Doris Rankin, who is the other principal player. In the cast are Thomas Braddon, Octavia Brooke, Ivo Dawson, Charles Lane, Jed Prouty, E. J. Ratcliffe, Maybelle Carr, Katherine Stewart, Arthur Carr, and Paul Kelly.

Another of those delightful and novel cartoons of Tony Sarg's, called "When the Whale Was Jonah," is an added attraction.

ARCADIA—"Wealth" showed Ethel Clayton in a new role. While good, she seemed to have been somewhat uninspired. William D. Taylor directed the piece, which was written by Cosmo Hamilton, who has a number of successes to his credit.

The star appears at her best in the emotional roles. The surrounding players do good work, especially Herbert Rawlinson as a husband who does not care very much for the idea of wealth.

The story, briefly, tells about a wealthy man who marries an artist who is poor. The match, like many in life, is not a happy one because reality, is not a happy one because of paternal interference, but happiness comes to the couple in a mild way after many hardships.

Palace and Imperial—"Carnival" is a British-made film which Harley Knoles directed. However, unlike many other foreign pictures, this one is exceptionally good and shows the beauty of the Old World in artistic settings for the action of the piece.

Matheson Lang and H. C. M. Harding wrote the piece, which was adapted from the play of the same title. The story might be likened to a modern version of the famous play of "Othello," but without the tragedy part of it.

Matheson Lang plays the role of an Italian actor, with just the proper amount of emotionalism to make it effective.

Victoria—"Love's Penalty" suffers from a poor story, although the star is fine. Hope Hampton should have her stories especially written for her because she is a distinctive type of player and the ordinary material does not seem to "fit." John Gilbert seems to have tried for this one, because his name in there as author, scenarist and director.

Miss Hampton does her finest work so far in this picture, which depicts a girl who plans revenge upon the betrayer of her sister, although her own love affair is in peril.

Capitol—"Behind Masks" has nothing to do with the W. T. Benda idea, but has Dorothy Dalton in an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's story which was known in novel form as "Jeanne of the Marshes."

Heading the cast in support of the star is Fredrick Vogeding, a popular Dutch actor, who makes his debut in American films as leading man. William P. Carleton, who has been seen in support of many stars, has a strong role. Others in the cast include Kempton Greene, Lewis Broughton, an English actor; Gladys Valerie, Alex Kaufman and Julia Swaney Gordon.

Regent—"A Divorce of Convenience" is not so appropriate a title for Owen Moore now that he recently announced his marriage to Katherine Perry, who also appears in this picture.

The story is one that was written especially for Mr. Moore by Victor Heerman. In constructing this new farce the author concentrated his efforts about the particular talents of the star. The two leading feminine parts are portrayed by Katherine Perry and Nita Naldi.

JACK NORWORTH IS HIT OF SUMMER SHOW AT KEITH'S

Van Hoven, the Mad Magician, Also Scores in Good Program

Keith's—Like a summer breeze—cool and comforting—is the offering of Jack Norworth, who headlines the bill. Mr. Norworth is an Oak Lane-Philadelphia product, but his merchandise of comedy and song has a national market. His songs click with wit and philosophy and he has the knack of saying much in a few words.

He offered several new specimens from the Norworth factory on this visit and the audience liked his brand of goods immensely, for it constantly asked for more.

Frank Van Hoven, "The Mad Magician," has been abroad for several years. On this first visit here for some time, quick comedy of effervescent and sometimes startling kind was offered by Van Hoven, who supplied magic between laughs. He scored a solid hit.

A dainty touch is given by Janet Adair, who sings clear songs intimately and who, best of all, exposes every word clearly to the ears of those present. She was appreciated cordially, and set the pace for applause.

Problems which we will have to deal with in the future were discussed by Dorothy Sadler and William Gaston, who presented a playlet somewhat fascinating and brim full of interest.

Oliver Brice and Al Rauh offered an entertaining skit, rich in novelty. Lesley and O'Connor, Philadelphia team, danced artistically and good acts were presented by Gold and Edwards and the Five Avalons.

Topic of the day on the screen were up to the moment.
