THE DAILY NOVELETTE

The Gift of the Sea By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I'm sorry, Ben. Mother and I are ashamed of the way Daisy has behaved—expecting to marry you in the winter and now running away with that traveling salesman from Boston—yes, the minister at Tuloses married them that afternoon, and now as long's they're married and he is her husband, why we've got to make the best of it. why we've got to make the best of it. But we'd a hull sight ruther Daisy had

But we'd a hull sight ruther Daisy had married you—what can I say to comfort you. Ben?"

Ben Raymond's tanned face seemed to pale, a tired look came into his dark blue eyes and his firm lips were a straight hard line that parted in a grim smile at the shame-faced countenance of William Brewer.

"Don't worry about me, Mr. Brewer."

"You're a son to be proud of, Ben," mid the older man hoarsely, as he went

Ben paused with his hand on the painter of the lighthouse motorboat. The smile had faded and there was only the grimness left on his face. The boat was laden with supplies for the lightuse, standing clean and white at the end of the long shoal two miles from the mainland. Ben was assistant keeper there, and he and Daisy had planned an it was not to be. Therefore, the light-house looked colder and lonelier than ever as his boat dashed across the bay. He might have been jilted every day of the week for all the emotion he showed when he mounted the stairs to the cozy living room and told his uncle and aunt the news.

When the keeper and his good wife had exhausted their anger and the noon-day dinner was cleared away Ben found work to do in the lamp room, and the
