

"The Love Cowards"

By HAZEL DEVO BATTLE

Nancy Hathaway, because her love has disappointed her, becomes a love coward. In order to get away she accepts a position as governess to a little child in a lonely house on the Massachusetts coast, and there discovers that Bruce Henderson, Trix's Uncle, has some sinister influence over the child. Bruce does not appear to Nancy in an ordinary way, and tries in every way to force her to leave, until finally one night he seizes her in his arms and kisses her. To her horror, Nancy cannot help him as she should, but is determined to stay because of her love for the child. Bruce has forbidden Trix to have any friends, and she is even forbidden to go to school. Even her people, and Nancy disobeys and takes the child to tea at Dr. Hunt's. Bruce learns of this and returns to the house, and in a fit of rage, because of the result on the over-protective child, Nancy appeals to Miss Henderson, who tells her the truth about Bruce's character, and that Trix is the result of his treatment at the hands of her mother, who, on the night before her marriage to Bruce, eloped with Hallins, his younger brother.

"Nancy, You Are Cruel!"

NANCY'S eyes had widened as Miss Henderson told her story, for much of Bruce Henderson's attitude toward Trix had been explained, but she still did not understand what he had done to the child, and she had to know the truth. "Now that you know the truth, you will understand why I have done as I have done," said Miss Henderson almost pleadingly. "I know what Bruce has done to Trix, and I know what he has done to her mother. I realize what the loss of faith in all womanhood has done for him. I have done my best to appreciate that and sympathize with him. Nancy shook her head. "Sympathize with him when he has treated me as the mother of an innocent baby like Trix? No, I can't even pity him."

Through a Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

They say love is blind. Because it seems not to see in us the petty little faults and failings that are plain to the cool eye of the world, because it finds in the eyes of the beloved a "different" from the ordinary human being in the world, because it glorifies us. And yet in none of these things is love blind. Love is a power that looks for the good and the true in the shadow of the real. Love looks for the good, and in its search it finds the good in the world, because it glorifies us. Some of us have been so fortunate as to meet here and there on our journey, a few great souls who saw no bad in any one, and who were so kind and so true, and so good, that they illuminated the world, and in their light, indeed, they had no need of light.

Getting Rid of Freckles

Dear Madam:—I have been troubled for some time with freckles. There was an advertisement in a paper which I read...

Prevention of Hay Fever

Dear Madam:—Could you suggest to me where I could receive treatment for hay fever at a very low price? I have tried this summer and I cannot get any relief because I am not able to afford the expense of going to a specialist.

Selling a Liberty Bond

Dear Madam:—Having received much kind advice from you before, I am writing again. Where can I sell a Liberty Bond at or near its face value? I am anxious to know as soon as possible.

Her Party Was Successful

Dear Madam:—I am here again to give you advice of the best way to sell a Liberty Bond. It is the best kind of a bond to buy, and it is the best way to get it.

Things You'll Love to Make

Dainty Flower Luncheon Set. You can have a large lunch set on a small centerpiece with matching napkins and napkins. For the corner decorations cut the basket part of colored tissue and apply it to the square of the fabric. Embroider the flowers in blue on the tissue. It is well to use the dominating color of the decoration on the centerpiece.

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

The Pirates' Jewels By DADDY

JEWELS of all kinds filled the pirates' cave. They glittered and sparkled in the mirrors that caught the sunlight and threw the rays into the corners of the great chamber. They shined from shadowy pockets in the ceiling. The pirates who owned this cave had just robbed a lot of ships to steal all these jewels. Billy to Peggy and Flitter-Flash. "Indeed they did, if all the stories about them are true," whispered the king diamond. "And, according to these same stories, they have suffered heavy punishment all through the years since they robbed their last ship."

Her Story Was Like Cinderella's, Only She Didn't Live Happily Ever After

She Eloped With the Boy Next Door to Get Away From the Drudgery of Her Home, Like So Many Oldest Daughters

IN THE fairy tale, Cinderella was safe when she found her prince. Her life of drudgery and dreariness was over; from that time on she was a gay princess, living a life of sunshine and happiness without the restraint of her stepmother and her ugly sisters.

IT CAN never be the same, now. She may be resigned to her fate; she may take up her routine again with submission. But there will always be resentment, and always the memory of the time her prince came and rescued her.

And, even if it is deep down in her heart, there will also be the hope that he will come again.

Scissors say that she was too young to know love, and reformers say that she was wrong to elope.

Sixteen is young to marry, but when a girl has been living in a dreary, narrow woman is it fair to drag her away from marriage because she is just a little girl?

CAN she be blamed entirely for taking the one opportunity she had for getting out from under the burden of that responsibility, the yoke of that restriction?

Oh, how many Cinderellas there are who assume the charge of the house and the babies as soon as they have learned to pick up the youngest and wash dishes without breaking them!

How many girls there are who are kept away from the boy and girl parties and affairs that keep them normal and natural and contented?

They don't know about anything but the hard work and the scolding that is forced upon them.

If they make a mistake, out of the depth of their enforced ignorance, is it their fault?

handing without taking up very much room. The buffer is priced $1 and chamois rolls cost six cents each. For the girl who frequently casts dinner without going home from the office one of these kept in a desk drawer is most convenient.

New toothbrushes are nearly always very stiff, and if one's gums are inclined to be the least bit sensitive the new brush is far from pleasant to use, and, too, there are some of us with such sensitive gums that the stiff bristles of the toothbrush always irritate and make the gums bleed. There can be a real toothbrush which is soft and pliable and can be bent to any shape desired. The brush is priced at fifty cents, and will most certainly solve the problem of sore gums.

Stockings over the knees in summer are always very warm and uncomfortable, and yet if I roll them below the knees the top always gets bunched and is liable to show every time I move. One of the shops is selling women's socks with the new drop-knee. In black and white, they are long enough to reach just to the knee, are held securely in place by a round garter, make for comfort and coolness and do away with the bunch that comes from rolling long stockings. And best of all is the price, forty-eight cents.
