OUTDOOR DRILL DELAYED

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger Civilians' Army Training Camp, Camp Meade, Md., Aug. 4.—Sore arms were the order of the day this morning when the 1400 rookies here to receive military training were awakened by the bugle call at reveille.
Yesterday afternoon the men received their inoculations against disease, and as a result this morning they were bumped into them or started slapping those arms carelessly.
Rain yesterday held up the first outdoor drilling scheduled, as the field was merely too soggy to do anything. Activities were transferred inside the barnacles and the regulars assigned to packs and the men instructed them in handling and caring for rifles and rolling packs and in preliminary foot movements—all things that could be done on the inside.

Company A Does Well Company A, composed entirely of Philadelphians, went through its work with thoroughness, and was highly complimented by the older men on its showing. Company B, made up of men from Pennsylvania, many from Philadelphia, shared in these honors.
Night-time witnessed the inauguration of the program of moving pictures prepared by the War Department for the camps, which all rookies are required to see. The pictures depict many of the activities of the soldier and show how to handle the rifle, roll packs, carry guns, also teaching personal cleanliness and hygiene and many other things necessary for a well-trained and healthy army.

Philadelphia's contingent has planned many ways of enjoying itself in the evenings when there are no labors on the field. A jazz orchestra, consisting chiefly of cornet and mouth organs, provides a certain quality of music in great quantity, though the members themselves do not vouch for its superiority.

Seven in Orchestra
At present this orchestra consists of seven members: Joseph W. Beach, 1110 Olive street; Paul G. Coleman, 4071 Lancaster avenue; Walter N.
Greenbaum, 4520 North Thirty-ninth street; Andrew T. Gallagher, 830 South Fifty-eighth street; Ralph W. Michner, 140 East Meehan street; Murray A. Stokes, 4601 North Twentieth street; and John C. Weeks, 2218 Es-taugh street.

They hope, in a few days, to be able to locate some new talent on a comb in order to augment the orchestra, but it is the hope and fervent prayer of soldiers in adjoining barracks that all have something happen to their wind-pipes. Officers are agreeing in this, as they do not care about chasing around all hours of the night and silencing the would-be Sousa's.
They're a happy bunch, though, and a little thing like a calling down does not bother them at all, unless the officers are mighty peevish, and the men that have been assigned to them are far from that.
Outdoor drill was started today.
