James and Schuck Again Are Chums

ignorance at the earnest request of the condemned man. Schuck's father is battling to the last line to have his son's sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Schuck's spirit of bravado has been calmed to a great extent by the realization that he must travel the same path that three others have taken since he went into the death have taken should be doesn't show it by his house, but he doesn't show it by his manner when any one is around. He is full of fun and jibes and jests with James and then engages him in their strange game of pinochle.

James Is More Studious

James has developed a penchant for reading. He is of a more sober mind than Shuck and would much rather read a good book than play cards, but Schuck is so insistent that James in-variably plays cards when asked. too, is given to reading his He spends the early morning Bible. He spends the early morning hours and late eyening hours reading, and when able to is always seeking knowledge as to what is being done to reach the Governor to stay off the all that wil send him and Schuck through the little green door.

On July 26 a Negro murderer went through that door. His going left the other inmates of the death house with a bad case of nerves. They one and all knew they were destined to make that same journey, but the high morale that is apparent in that little building. that is apparent in that little building soon brought the inmates back to earth. Some one put a record on the victrola. It was 'jazz,' and soon the going of the man was a past theident.

But the most trying ordeal outside of their own execution is coming to James and Schuck during the week beginning witch, wife murderer, who occupies Cell No. 1. alongside James, and Harold Lamble, alias George Brennam, of Paterson, another murderer, who occupies Cell No. 4, alongside Schuck, are to die that week. Both were in the death house when Schuck and James arriver. They became chummy and now that it is almost certain that Fixingmens and Lamble must tain that Fitzimmons and Lamble must die, naturally Schuck and James dread the time of the parting. However, it can be said that Schuck is at all times buoying up the hopes of Lamble who, it is said, has interested Tex Rickard, who promoted the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, in his behalf and dec'ares that Rickard is going to carry his case to the United States Supreme Court. Schuck and James are model prison-ers, according to James Mulherin, prin-

They are bearing up as well as could be expected under such trying condi-tions. Of course the death house is no the most cheerful place in this prison However, we make the stay of the inmates there just as pleasant as possible We give them everything they want in the line of food, and there are other privileges that they get not accorded to the other inmates.

Accorded Privileges

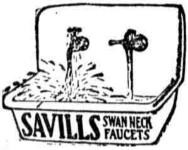

is my aim to be as merciful a possible to those unfortunate enough t come to me as prisoners in the death Those poor fellows are entitled to consideration and they get it just as far as possible without violating the rules. Any request within reason is complied with, and the inmates are allowed to see their immediate relatives once a week. Those going to the chair are entitled to take their last farewell of their immediate family twenty-four hours before they are put to death. The keeper said that no one answer ing neither the name or description of Mary McGarvey had called to see Schuck or had written to him. "We carefully peruse all mail to con-demned prisoners," he said, "and keep from them letters we feel they should not get. I know that Mary McGarvey has not been here inquiring for Schuck, and I know that no letters were sen by her to Schuck.

"I do not anticipate any breakdown on the part of either. They seem to be perfectly resigned to their fate, but, like all other inmates of the death house, they are possessed of a belief that the Governor will intervene at the last moment and grant them a reprieve. It is well that the poor fellows do become imbued with that belief, because it keeps them from brooding. Then we have other ways of breaking the monot-ony of the death house."

See Colorful Campaign

Philadelphians who like a dash of the colorful and the spectacular with their politics are likely to see a brand new kind of a ticket nominated in the primaries. Dramatic elections in this city in the post have been epitomized under such descriptions as "Down with the Mur-der ticket" and "No fifty-fifty division of the spoils."

This year the "Rainbow" ticket may be observed in the political firmament. Like Joseph's coat, the full list of candidates as nominated will be reminiscent of that ancient garment of many just how the scheme works out. Hence the chance for surprises and the en-hancement of the prospect for a "coat of many colors."

Of course, all this may be upset in the event that Senator Penrose thun-ders a broadside against the Vares. Then there would be a real split and a smashing of the combine. But the combine leaders hope they will be let alone to work out their own destiny and at he same time save the face of the senior Senator.

Combine leaders are counting heavily n three things: First, That Senator Penrose will say nothing and trust to the combine to keep him straight with the independ-

Combine leaders predict that it will be light, and say that the reason for that is that the registration days were set so early in the game.

Philadelphia's registration days are Tuesday, August 30; Tuesday, September 6, and Saturday, September 10. Many thousands will be out of the city for a certainty on the first registration day, as they will not have returned from their vacations.

Just to show how these dates work

Just to show how these dates work in favor of the organization and against the independents, reference was made to the fact that the registration days in Pittsburgh and Scranton are later, insuring that nearly every man or woman who desires to be registered will be in the city. The dates in those two cities are September S, 13 and 17.

Look Ahead to Mayoralty Senator Penrose apparently is paying more real attention to the gubernatorial ticket for next year than he is to the local ticket. He would like to see the situation here work itself out, not in too "raw" a fashion, it was explained, so that he would not be ham-pered in picking a State ticket.

from such weighty considerations as revision of national taxation, the tariff and his own sphere of influence at Washington.

Then, too, the combine is willing to wear a coat of many colors if it will help to keep all the organization leaders together for a grand rally around a harmony candidate for Mayor to succeed Mayor Moore.

It will be a happy day for organization leaders if they can gleefully sing, "Hail! hail! the gang's all here" when the candidate for Mayor is selected.

They won't care what kind of a coat he wears, they say, if only they

TRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR MONDAY

The Second Week of the August Furniture Sale Will Bring a Relatively Larger Number of

THE first day of the Sale exceeded the selling record of the same day last August by thousands of dollars. The first week, despite several days of unfavorable weather, was remarkably active. But a large number of prospective Furniture buyers were taking our advice and shopping around the city. Many of these shoppers have not yet bought, but they have compared—they have learned that Furniture prices everywhere are very much lower than last year. They have learned, also, that the best-selected stock of the KIND OF FURNITURE IN DEMAND by home furnishers of good taste and good judgment as to QUALITY and VALUE, is to be found in the Strawbridge & Clothier August Sale.

THAT is why we say the second week will bring a relatively I larger number of customers to this Store than the first week, and a relatively smaller number to stores where the Furniture is of lower grade, and to stores where there is a topheavy accumulation of over-elaborate, high-priced Furniture. We are fortunate in having an ENTIRELY NEW STOCK of fine handsome, beautifully finished, moderately priced Furniture, from the foremost manufacturers in this country, all at less than regular prices and a large portion of it at half and less than half the recent regular prices. Yes, it is now pretty generally known that best Furniture values are here.

Twelve Examples—New Furniture at Half and Less than Half Last Year's Prices

These are among the extraordinary purchases for the August Sale. Every one-and you will find dozens of equally great values when you come—is at least one-half less than last year; some are one-half less than the early 1921 price, which means much
